PROCLAIM U. S. AS NEUTRAL

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4.—The United States today proclaimed its neutrality in the European war. The proclamation was signed and issued by President Wilson.

The proclamation reads:

Whereas, a state of war unhappily exists between Austria-Hungary and Servia and between Germany and Russia and between Germany and France, and

Whereas, the United States is on terms of friendship and amity with the contending powers and with the persons inhabiting their several dominions; and

Whereas, there are citizens of the United States residing within the territories or dominions of each of the said belligerents and carrying on commerce, trade, or other business or pursuits therein; and

Whereas, there are subjects of each of the said belligerents residing within the territory or jurisdiction of the United tates and carrying on commerce, trade

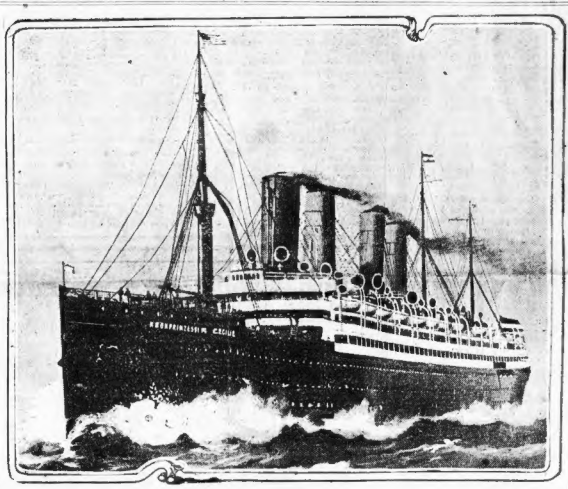
The Kronprinzessin Cecilie



MISSING LINER CECILIE SAFE

BAR HARBOR, Me., Aug. 4.—The Kronprinzessin Cecilie, the great "treasure ship" which has been missing three days, put in here today after being chased from the English coast by an unknown vessel, which the passengers thought was a French warship.

Captain Polack stated on Sunday that he intercepted a wireless from one French vessel to another, giving warning of the Cecilie's proximity. Fog helped the Cecilie to escape.

The Cecilie had $10,600,000 in gold aboard, about 1,200 passengers, and 3,500 bags of mail. The local postoffice was offered the mail for forwarding, and telegraphed to Washington for instructions.

The passengers, it was announced, would be landed at once and every facility offered to get them to New York immediately.

Passengers told a dramatic story of the race back across the Atlantic. For three days an unknown vessel hung on the horizon behind them and the passengers were in a panic for fear it was a pursuing warship.

The Cecilie ran for two nights with all lights extinguished or blanketed with canvas. She was like a huge black ghost ship in the fog.

The Cecilie was about 900 miles from Plymouth, England, her first regular port of call, when wireless messages advised her to turn back to the United States.

That was last Friday. The captain came into the smoking room and told the passengers:

Germans Cut to Pieces.

By FRANKLIN P. MERRICK.

PARIS, Aug. 4.—A squad of German cavalry that invaded France early today north of Nancy was completely annihilated, fifty being killed and seventy-five taken prisoners.

The raiding force entered France with the purpos of destroying the telegraph and telephone linees. They had reached Chanenettes, a little town fifteen miles from the border when they were overtaken by a squadron of French cavalry sent in pursuit, when their invasion was reported.

Seeking shelter within the houses of the village, they stood off the French troopers for an hour, but finally their ammunition gave out and those that were left alive ahd to surrender.

The commander of the German soldiers blew out his brains rather than yield his sword.

Two German patrols who crossed the frontier in the Vosges Mountains destroyed numerous telephone boxes and cut the telegraph wires. They escaped to th border after their raid.

At Velletieot, the Germans have crossed the border three times, but on each attempt to pentrate the country have been repulsed.

Raiding the town of Lepaix, the Germans seized all food supplies and horses that they could find. The inhabitants, left without food, have taken refuge in Belfort, women and children being compelled to walk sixteen miles in a heavy storm.

All th farms about St. Ail, near Briey, have been looted, the Germans killing and carrying away all the cattle and sheep.

FRENCH WIN FIGHT

GREAT BRITAIN MOBILIZES; READY TO PLUNGE INTO WAR

LONDON, Aug. 4.—The British government has sent an ultimatum to Germany demanding that its troops be withdrawn from Belgium by midnight.

LONDON, Aug. 4.—The special correspondent of the Daily News at Brussels telegraphs this afternoon:

"I learn officially at the Ministry of War that Germany declared war on Belgium this morning."

(The above bulletins were received at about the same hour—today noon. It is possible the latter is in effect a reply to the former. If so, England has no further option—she must declare war on Germany. In any event, the position of England and Germany with regard to Belgium seems to be irreconcilable.)

LATER.

BERLIN, Aug. 4.—It is semi-officially stated that Germany has decided to reject the ultimatum from England demanding assurances of Belgium's neutrality.

BRUSSELS, Aug. 4.—The Minister of War announced in the Chamber of Deputies today that Germany had invaded Belgium. It is reported in Parliament that Germany had declared war on Belgium.

LONDON, Aug. 4.—The French Embassy today received an official dispatch stating that German troops had invaded Belgium at Verviers, fourteen miles from Liege.

WAR BULLETINS

PARIS, Aug. 4.—War has been officially declared between France and Germany.

[The AMERICAN calls attention to the fact that this dispatch does not state whether Germany or France declared war. It is possible that the correspondent sent a dispatch stating that a "state of war" had been declared and the words "state of" were lost in passing through the Paris censor's hands or in transmission by cable.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4.—Secretary Bryan today was notified by the French embassy here that a state of war exists between France and Germany.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4.—The German ambassador notified the State Department today that no American citizens will be allowed to leave Germany during the period of the mobilization of its army.

LONDON, Aug. 4.—A desperate battle between German and French fleets in the North Sea is reported in a dispatch from Tyne. It says that English ships arriving at Tyne early today reported that a conflict was raging off Flamborough Head. The pilot of one said the ship's master had informed him that he saw German and French ships in combat.

LONDON, Aug. 4.—Lord Morley, president of the council, resigned from the cabinet today. This action was a protest against his colleagues' desire for war.

German Ultimatnm.

LONDON, Aug. 4.—Germany has sent another ultimatum to Belgium relative to that country's facilitating the movement of German troops. It is officially stated that this note is of a "very threatening character" and that Germany is prepared to carry through by force of arms, if necessary, the measures she considers essential.

Belgium Ready to Fight.

BRUSSELS, Aug. 4.—Belgium today refused to answer an ultimatum from Germany demanding that it offer no resistance to German troops crossing its territory. The German minister was notified that the government considered a reply unnnecessary, it having already stated its position. The Belgian army is ready for war with Germany. Troops are working night and day throwing up entrenchments on the frontier. The authorities have seized the wireless equipment on the German school here.

Britian Mobilizes.

LONDON, Aug. 4.—Orders were read throughout England today mobilizing the British army.

Asquith Announces England's War Move.

LONDON, Aug. 4.—All galleries of the House of Commons were crowded this afternoon when Parliament resumed its session expecting to hear from the government the tidings that it had decided upon war.

One of the first announcements made was that King George had called out the army reserves and the territorial forces.

Rapidly rushing it work, the House of Commons passed in five minutes all outstanding notes, amounting to more than $500,000,000.

With financial matters out of the way, the House then took up consideration of the foreign issues.

Tense silence reigned as Premier Asquith arose to make his long-expected statement, and no sound was heard in the Chamber as he made known the fact that a nultimatum expiring at midnight had been sent to Germany.

The Premier stated that Sir Edward Grey, the Foreign Secretary, had sent to the British Ambassador in Berlin a telegram informing him of the appeal from King Albert of Belgium for diplomatic intervention.

He proceeded to state that Belgium had categorically refused to sanction "A flagrant violation of the laws of nations," and then announced that the German government had been asked to give a satisfactory reply by midnight on the question of Belgium neutrality.

"The British government," said Premier Asquith, "has requested assurance that the neutrality of Belgium be respected by Germany and has asked an immediate reply. The German ministry has notified Belgium that as that country had declined the well intentioned offer of Germany, it is regretted it would have to be necessary to carry it out by force of arms.

"The premier of the Belgium government has informed England that Belgian territory has been violated."

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4.—President Wilson today signed the bill providing $250,000 for the relief of Americans abroad. Secretary of State Bryan is preparing a bill providing for the additional appropriation of $2,500,000.

TOKIO, Aug. 4.—The Japanese foreign office today issued a statement that if the war extends to the Far East and England is involved in it Japan may find it necessary to participate in it in fulfillment of the Anglo-Japanese alliance.

BULLETINS

SWISS MOBILIZE.

BERNE, Aug. 4.—Mobilization of the military forces of Switzerland has been completed and every railroad bridge and mountain pass is occupied. Precautions have been taken to commandeer all available provisions and all means of travel.

ARREST WOMAN SPY.

STOCKHOLM, Aug. 4.—An Austrian woman was arrested today at Ostersund, Sweden, on the charge of being a Russian spy, according to word received here today. Photographs of Norwegian fortresses were found in her possession.

SHELLING OF LIBAU.

ST. PETERSBURG, Aug. 4.—Details of the bombardment on Sunday of the town of Libau by the German cruiser Augsberg were contained today in an official dispatch. The cruiser fired 20 shells and did only slight damage. One of the shells struck the naval hospital, but no one was hurt.

SPIES IN LONDON.

LONDON, Aug. 4.—Five men suspected of being foreign spies were arrested in London today.

SWEDISH MORATORIUM.

STOCKHOLM, Aug. 4.—A bill proposing a moratorium was introduced in Parliament today. There are 3,000 Russians here with no possibility of their being able to return home.

SERBS VICTORIOUS.

CROSS INTO FRANCE.

PARIS, Aug. 4.—A company of German troops crossed into France today near Mars-Latour.

NEUTRALITY PROCLAMATION BY PRESIDENT or other business or pursuits therein, and

NATION'S DUTY.

Whereas, the laws and treaties of the United States without interfering with the free expression of opinion and sympathy or with the commercial manufacture or sale, of arms or munitions of war, nevertheless impose upon all persons who may be within their territory and jurisdiction the duty of an impartial neutrality during the existence of the contest; and,

Whereas, it is the duty of a neutral government not to permit or suffer the making of its waters subservient to the purpose of war;

Now, therefore, I, Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States of America, in order to preserve the neutrality of the United States and of its citizens, and of persons within its territory and jurisdiction, and to enforce its laws and treaties, and in order that all persons, being warned of the general tenor of the laws and treaties of the United States in their behalf and of the law of nations, may thus be prevented from any violation of the same, do hereby declare and proclaim that by certain provisions of the act approved on the 4th day of March, A. D. 1909, commonly known as the "Penal code of the United States," the following acts are forbidden to be done, under severe penalties, within the territory and jurisdiction of the United States, to wit:

THESE ARE FORBIDDEN.

1—Accepting and exercising a commission to serve either of the said belligerents by land or by sea against the other belligerents.

2—Enlisting or entering into the service of either of the said belligerents as a soldier, or as a marine, or seaman on board of any vessel of war, letter of marque or privateer.

3—Hiring or retaining another person to enlist or enter himself in the service of either of the said belligerents as a soldier, or as a marine, or seaman on board of any vessel of war, letter of marque or privateer.

4—Hiring another person to go beyond the limits of jurisdiction of the United States with intent to be enlisted as aforesaid.

5—Hiring another person to go beyond the limits of the United States with intent to be entered into the service as aforesaid.

6—Retaining another person to go beyond the limit sof the United States with intent to be enlisted as aforesaid.

7—Retaining another person to go beyond the limits of the United States with intent to be entered into service as aforesaid. But the said act is not to be construed to extend to a citizen or a subject of either belligerent who, being transiently within the United States, shall, on board of any vessel of war which at the time of its arrival within the United States was fitted and equipped as such vessel of war, enlist or enter himself, or hire or retain another subject or citizen of the same belligerent who is transiently within the United States, to enlist or enter himself to serve such belligerent on board such vessel of war if the United States shall then be at peace with such belligerent practically.

8—Fitting out and arming or attempting to fit out and arm or procuring to be fitted out and armed or knowingly being concerned in the furnishing, fitting out or arming of any ship or vessel, with intent that such ship or vessel shall be employed in the service of either of said belligerents.

9—Issuing or delivering a commission within the territory or jurisdiction of the United States for any ship or vessel to the intent that she may be employed as aforesaid.

Limit Amount of Money Orders

A limit of $100 on foreign money orders intended to be used in aiding Americans to get back home has been made by the Postoffice Department. This amount is believed to be sufficient and applications for larger amounts to be used for speculative purposes, are being refused.

Refuse Parcel Post to Nations at War

Acting under orders from Washington, the postoffice today refused to accept parcel post packages going to France and Germany. In cases where the postage had been placed on the packages, the amount of the postage was refunded to the sender.

HAS $10,600,000 IN SPECIE ON BOARD

"We have received instructions to return to America. We have ample food and fuel and there is no danger. I ask you all to be patient and keep your heads."

OFFERED TO BUY THE SHIP.

A group of wealthy Americans offered to buy the ship on the spot and sail her under American colors. But Captain Polack refused, and refused also to send any wireless messages for fear of betraying the ship's position. He insisted on turning back.

The passengers on deck saw then that the great liner was turning around. Her wake curved behind her, then straightened out again and she was headed back along the way she had come.

Saturday, notice was posted saying the ship was returning by a route north of the regular steamer lanes. Then the officers told the passengers not to be surprised if all lights were extinguished.

Saturday also, sailors painted her funnels black, so that the big liner might have been mistaken for the Olympic, the big English Cunarder.

Saturday night, fog fell, but through the fog and with never a light showing, the ship hurried westward. The ship was dark. The passengers were alarmed and asked the captain to reduce his speed and sound his fog whistle. He consented to this, but no lights were lit.

RACED IN THE FOG.

The ship picked up full speed again at dawn. Fog still held, and under this cover the dramatic race was won. The Ceclile came into American waters early today and anchored at 6 o'clock this morning.

Her arrival caused great excitement here. Hundreds of people gathered on the beach and when her captain came ashore shortly after 7 o'clock several thousand people lined the beach.

The big German boat has been missing for three days. She has been variously reported captured by English cruisers, in a German port, off the north of Ireland, off Norway and elsewhere.

MANY BOSTONIANS ABOARD.

The immense fortune which she carried, $10,600,000, made her the greatest treasure ship that ever sailed. In addition she carried many Boston and New England passengers. The Cecilie's commander hurried to a telegraph office to get in touch with the line's officials. He was anxious to land his passengers. In conversation with the chief of police of Bar Harbor the captain said he wanted to land his passengers at once if it was not contrary to the customs or immigration laws of the country at this time. He seemed anxious to get in touch with government officials who could settle this point.

The captain would make no statement as to how far he had proceeded on the trip across the Atlantic before he turned back to the United States. He would not state if he had sighted a foreign warship and had been chased into port.

The liner is at anchor a quarter of a mile off shore. Only the captain's boat had come ashore up to 8 o'clock. Passengers could be seen grouped on the liner's decks.

Because of the treasure she carried, the fate of the Cecilie caused great anxiety to the bankers, who shipped the gold on her, and the marine underwriters, who insured it. When she sailed the European war clouds were not so threatening. The rate of insurance on the $10,600,000 she carries was about one-half per cent.—$5,000 on $1,000,000. Since then 4 per cent. has been paid on other shipments.

FIRMS WHO SHIPPED GOLD.

The immense fortune aboard the Cecilie was shipped by the following New York firms:

Five million dollars from the Guarantee Trust Company to their correspondent in London to balance up international debit and credit.

Three million dollars from the National City Bank to its correspondent in Paris.

One million six hundred thousand dollars from Heidelbach, Ickelheimer & Co. to its Paris correspondent.

One million dollars from Goldman, Sachs & Co. to its Paris correspondent.

The German Emperor owns much stock in both the North German Lloyd and the German-American Steamship Company.

Passengers on the Cecilie listed from Boston are: Mrs. J. C. Grew, wife of the secretary of the German embassy at Berlin; Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Hanssens; Henry H. Pennell, Jr.; Felix Vorenberg, president Gilchrist Company; Simon Vorenberg, head of clothing house S. Vorenberg & Co.; Harrison W. Smith; Elliot Wadsworth, Carl Ley, Miss Josephine B. Mahoney, Mrs. John J. Hall and daughter, Lillian, of Brighton; the Rev. and Mrs. Brian C. Roberts, Walter H. Roberts, George C. Arvedson, Mrs. Samuel Hoar, John D. Hoar and Miss Clara D. Hoar.

NEW ENGLANDERS ABOARD.

Listed from other New England cities are Lomisa Berkeman, Providence; Walter S. Hammons, Portland; Judge Charles F. Sterns, Providence; Dr. and Mrs. Charles A. Tuttle, New Haven; Mrs. G. J. Botterson, New Haven; Dr. Francesco D'Agistina, New Haven; Max Henkels, Bridgeport; Hugo Henning, Bridgeport, and Mrs. Christina Meffert, Meriden.

BRITISH SENTIMENT SOLID FOR WAR WITH KAISER

INVASION OF BELGIUM INFLAMES THE NATION

By HERBERT TEMPLE.

LONDON, Aug. 4.—Striking like a thunderbolt, Germany has gained an early advantage in the European warfare. Hurling her troops into Russia and invading the neutral Duchy of Luxemburg, she has occupied points of strategic value.

With her customary deliberation, England has waited until the last moment, but now she is ready to strike, and strike hard. Whether her entrance into the conflict at this time will be able to offset the advantage gained by the quick blows struck by Germany is a matter upon which military experts differ.

SOLID FOR WAR.

There is no further doubt here that the Cabinet is now solid for war. John Burns stood out to the last moment, refusing to alter his position despite the fact that other members of the anti-war faction were swing into line by the German violation of Belgian neutrality.

The announcement of his resignation, made at 2 a. m., caused no surprise, as he had declared to his friends that he would quit the Cabinet rather than be forced into the position of indorsing a warfare into which he believed England should not enter.

While the greater part of London was sleeping, having retired in the belief that today would bring a declaration of war, the Cabinet was in session with Premier Asquith in Downing street. A telephone line was in operation between the Premier's residence and Buckingham Palace. Several times Asquith left the meeting and used this telephone.

It is understood that King George had urged the Premier to avert war if possible without hurting England's honor. The sovereign was kept thoroughly in touch with the situation, as much so indeed as if he had been present at the meeting.

MORLEY MAY QUIT.

The night meeting of the Cabinet lasted until dawn and then the ministers went to their homes for a few hours' sleep. They were again summoned into session shortly before noon by Premier Asquith. Viscount Morley of Blackburn, president of the council, was not present at this meeting, and it was announced that he had resigned as protest against his colleagues' determination to embark on war. John Burns also failed to appear, although it was stated that his resignation had not yet been accepted.

While the Cabinet was sitting the Press Association announced that the government had been officially notified of Germany's invasion of Belgium and an official announcement was made that Germany had sent another ultimatum to Brussels. After the ministers had been conferring an hour, Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, left and went to Buckingham to see King George. In an attempt to prevent a declaration of war by England, the German embassy issued a denial of the dispatches saying the Kaiser's troops had invaded Belgium.

MOBILIZE TROOPS.

While the cabinet was discussing the crisis, the order providing for the mobilizing of the army was being read in the streets of London and other cities of the country. It was announced that the mobilization of the naval reserves had also been ordered.

While the decision as to war or peace hung in the balance today, eager crowds surrounded the newspaper offices waiting for the announcement to be made.

The cabinet adjourned shortly after the foreign office had sent to Premier Asquith an official statement from the Belgian minister that German troops had entered Belgium. Great suspense continued this afternoon, as no announcement was made when the cabinet adjourned as to whether a decision had been reached.

British arms will come out of the war victoriously.

"Just a word about the Americans, whom we all love dearly. Watch your west coast carefully and keep a sharp lookout on your Panama Canal. There is a quarter in the Far East, small from your point of vision at the moment, but with all Europe at war it may loom large at closer range from a California field glass.

"Japan is a nation of wonderful little fighters," was his parting comment.

General Bullock could not be found in Boston today.

Switzerland Seems Safest Place for American Tourists

Switzerland is the safest place for Americans in Europe. Besides being neutral, the country's physical characteristics make it next to impossible to invade, as the history of the liberty-loving Swiss testifies. As the "playground of Europe" has become an all year round resort, and is famous for its accommodations, Switzerland and safety may be said to be nearly synonymous from the tourist point of view.

GERMANY READY FOR TITANIC STRUGGLE

BERLIN, Aug. 4.—Germany is at war with France. This was officially announced today by Imperial Chancellor Von Bethmann-Hollweg. Diplomatic relations between the two countries have been severed. The chancellor gave this statement to the AMERICAN:

"Germany considers that a state of war exists between Germany and France owing to the latter's encroachments on German territory."

The chancellor asserted that this was not a declaration of war against France, but no further action by Germany is necessary. It is the desire of the Kaiser that France shall be the one to declare war.

German troops have seized all the railroads of Western Poland, driving back steadily the Russian troops who opposed their advance. Bridges destroyed by the Russians as they fell back are being reconstructed by German engineers. Warsaw will be invested within a short time and then the German land and sea forces will co-operate in an attack on St. Petersburg.

It is believed here that the Russian government will soon withdraw to Moscow.

RAILROAD JUNCTIONS TAKEN.

Three important railroad junctions in Poland were captured by the German troops without any great resistance being offered.

The Reichstag met today to vote supplies for the war with all the parties in complete unity. Even the Social Democrats, who normally oppose war, threw their support to the measure.

The government today issued a proclamation fixing the maximum price for food and other life's necessities. This action was taken to check merchants from demanding exorbitant prices for commodities.

All shops that refuse to take paper money, insisting upon gold or silver, will be closed forthwith.

GERMANY ALL SMILES.

Berlin today presents a different picture than it did on Sunday. Then the minds were concentrated for the most part on the certain loss they were to suffer because of the war.

But today, knowing that Germany has before her a terrific struggle against the big powers of Europe, the people go about with smiles on their faces. They are willing to make any needed sacrifice to uphold the honor and national dignity of Germany, and the wave of national patriotism that rolled over here on Saturday, which receded Sunday is now rolling back with increased power.

German reservists are arriving here by the thousands today and their appearance on the streets is greeted with frenzied cheers.

Very few of the tourists who were in the large towns of Germany up to Saturday are left. All who could embarked at once on trains for the border countries. However, there are in Berlin today more than a thousand visitors who have no present hope of getting out, as all train service except that for the soldiery has been suspended.

LINER LANDS 1,000.

DOVER, Aug. 4.—The liner Finland, bound for Antwerp, with 1,000 passengers on board, put in here today and landed her passengers. None of them could find accommodations in Dover and proceeded to Southampton.

CHECK AUSTRIANS.

NISH, Aug. 4.—The war office announced today that Servian troops had thus far prevented an invasion by Austrians along the River Danube.

AMERICAN TOURISTS GO HUNGRY IN LONDON

By LAWRENCE ELSTON.

Staff Correspondent of the American.

LONDON, Aug. 4.—Panic among the 25,000 Americans here increased today when it seemed practically certain that England would be plunged into the general European war and that practically all transatlantic traffic would be suspended.

The condition of many of the Americans here is pitiful. Without funds and without friends, they have had to depend upon United States Ambassador Walter H. Page to help them secure food and lodging. Page is doing everything possible to help all the needy ones, but the requests are flooding him. Each must take its turn and those who have left off in making an appeal until all other plans failed may not be able to get relief for another twenty-four hours.

Some of the Americans here have not had food for nearly a day. Last night many of them did not have the price of lodgings and were compelled to sit up all night on chairs in hotel lobbies, railroad stations and the city parks.

However, this condition may be relieved before night. Prominent Americans here are sending together all their stranded fellow men and the committee appointed to care for those most in need has doled out sufficient funds to carry the penniless through for another day or two.

"Travel on the channel boats is nothing short of hell," declared State Senator Hawes of Fredonia, who was one of the last arrivals from Paris.

"Women and children are packed in like cattle. The boats are overloaded and those who travel on them must go without food and quite often without water during the entire trip."

Oscar Strauss, the New York merchant, addressed the Americans at a meeting here and told them that worry was needless.

"The American government will work out a plan to get us back to our homes even if we can't get passage on ships," he said. "I'll make the best of the situation. It won't be long before our government sends help."

MANY HARVARD MEN CAUGHT IN WAR ZONE

Among the thousands of New Englanders now abroad there is a long list of Harvard professors and students. Professor Edward Dyer Peters of the metallurgy department is supposed to be in Freiburg, Saxony. Professors E. H. Hall, Hugo Munsterberg and W. C. Sabine are also abroad, together with N. A. Yeomans and family, Assistant Dean of the Graduate School, Morris Gray, Jr., Richard C. Moore of the theology department, C. R. Post, assistant in the fine arts department; Percival Wendall, professor of English; H. C. Bierwirth, A. E. Kennelly and family, Max Kellner and George H. Palmer, professor emeritus. Scott, who was married to Miss Esther Kendall June 15, is reported to be somewhere in the war zone on his honeymoon. Professor C. H. White, assistant in mining, is abroad. Miss A. L. Gibson, one of the few students in the medical school, is somewhere in Europe. Dr. Milton J. Rosenau, a medical school professor, is also somewhere on the Continent.

Several German students may be called upon to go home and fight for their mother country. French and Russian students may be called upon likewise.

BRITISH OFFICER, ON WAY HOME, WARNS U. S. TO BEWARE OF JAPAN

The British consul in Boston today said he knew nothing of the report that 100 British army and naval officers and sailors will come to Boston and sail from here for England.

The report came from New York. Among the officers named as likely to sail were Lieutenant-General Sir G. M. Bullock, K. C. B., his aide-de-camp, Captain Boyland Laurence of the Coldstream Guards, stationed at Windsor.

Captain Laurence said that the party had hopes of an uninterrupted trip.

"Of course one cannot tell what may happen after leaving the States," he said, "but we hope for the best. We are all spoiling to get into action and we sincerely hope we will not be disappointed. As your illustrious American, General Sherman, said: 'War is hell,' but I guess it had to come in Europe. England is well prepared for any move the government may make, and I feel sure

WAR OFFICIALLY DECLARED BY FRANCE AND GERMANY

REJOICING IN PARIS OVER BRITAIN'S STAND

By FRANKLIN P. MERRICK

PARIS, Aug. 4.—War between Germany and France has officially been declared. This announcement was made here today.

Baron Von Schoen, the German ambassador, left here at midnight for Berlin. Myron T. Herrick, the American ambassador, will represent Germany's interests while the war continues. United States Consul-General Thackera will act for the German consul-general.

PARIS WILD WITH ENTHUSIASM.

All Paris is wild with enthusiasm over the declaration of war. Literally, the British Empire's declaration that England will protect France in all necessary ways is the source of great joy. All believe that with Russia, Great Britain will be indirectly allied with France. The cheers for the Belgians and United States were likewise tumultuous. Herrick is a climax on Sunday when Baron Von Schoen presented Premier Viviani with a document declaring that the German government had ordered its French envoy to leave Germany and declaring formally commenced hostilities. The French deemed that France had acted in accordance with honor, while Von Schoen's statement to Germany acted in the contrary.

Acting on the advice of Premier Viviani, the note refrained to the end that the responsibility for the war should rest with the Germans, inasmuch as the Belgians refused to allow the German troops to march through their country. Premier Viviani has also acting foreign minister, and the French government is based at Bordeaux, 350 miles southwest of Paris.

PARIS SHOPS CLOSED.

All stores, restaurants and many other establishments have been closed since the declaration of war was declared. Only a few stores are open today, but no provisions are for sale. The stores were so closed that they will not be reopened until after the war.

Some of the well-to-do Americans are in the city, watched with a private army that they were compelled to auction off their jewelry and other valuables, so that they might raise money for food and lodging in the city, whose prices for the necessities have soared to a record mark.

The American colony here is being increased hourly by fresh arrivals from the French frontier and from towns in Germany and Switzerland from which they fled at the first signs of war. They brought in tales of hardships encountered during the journey and of efforts made by the German frontier guards to detain them.

They also told of encountering huge German armies moving in a line slope toward France. They gave it as their impression that it will be only a matter of days before the huge forces of the Kaiser cross the French border and engage in battle with the French troops massed near their own lines.

The American ambassador Herrick is doing everything possible to alleviate the sensation of the homeless and penniless Americans. He has been able to secure passage for all those who have applied to him for aid, and those who control it seem to release it without much difficulty.

A rumor of the Woodrow Wilson is among the passengers on the Lusitania, which sails from Liverpool for New York on the 6th, is published. The rumor is denied by the White House here. It is said that Secretary of State Bryan will not return to Washington until the end of August.

ACTION OUT JEWELRY.

Frank D. Sutton of Chicago and H. Angel Hess of Kansas City were among the passengers arriving here today on the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse. Crossing over with them were several Germans and French. Sutton and Hess lost their jewelry and money when they were forced to auction off their valuables. The jewelry was worth $700.

Mrs. Charles Cook and the wife of Clarence Moskayer, head of the postal telegraph, with his two children, were also fortunate, and is now on his way to the English capital.

Those who have been arriving here from Geneva, Switzerland, declared that at the German border all passengers who did not have passports were put off. There were a dozen Americans among the sixty who were not allowed to proceed on their journey. One of the trains was emptied at Luxemburg and passengers were dumped out to make room for German soldiers.

The American hospital here has been placed at the disposal of Ambassador Herrick.

PATHETIC SCENES AS GERMANS QUIT PARIS

By C. F. BERTELLI,

Paris Correspondent of the American.

PARIS, Aug. 4.—I have just seen a spectacle that I think the lowest depths of sorrow and grief—the exodus of ruined millions of Germans, expelled from France. Hundreds of thousands of Frenchmen are left in Paris on the glorious mission of fighting for their country, to be mowed down in countless numbers, but because theirs is a noble fate, they do not excite such profound sympathy as the French-loving Germans who were turned out of the capital, leaving behind them all visible means of subsistence, parting perhaps, forever from their French wives and children.

They used to several thousand strong in a double file, and at the Northern Railway station wealthy men who yesterday headed big banks and controlled hundreds of employes stood shoulder to shoulder with laborers or hotel servants, bravely they were held together in a common bond of birth, not with any hatred of France, but better in their treatment at the Kaiser, who, they believe, provoked this ghastly debacle. For one and all it means complete ruin.

FAILED TO BE NATURALIZED.

Some had lived here twenty years but had not become naturalized Frenchmen; therefore they shared the common lot of Germans who arrived only a week ago. That they love the fair land of France, now about to be drenched with blood, was shown by the fact that when the procession of Frenchmen passed the stations, waving flags and singing patriotic songs, they all doffed their hats respectfully.

Through the cockpit of peril is every woman of France. As troop trains steam out of the stations, mothers, wives and children will with grief and dismay about frantically on the railroad bridges, hoping to get a last word or last glimpse of their loved ones.

Every emotion here was overrun with wealthy foreigners weeping at the breaking up of their Paris homes and filled with mortal terror, wondering whether they should ever see with their lives. Their tears, though natural, are misplaced, as the government is doing everything possible for them. But wealth is no title to special protection in the present foreign worker who has received anything more to worse off than his richest fellow countrymen or women.

DEPART WITH VIOLINS.

There is not a Hungarian musician here. They, too, were forced to join the great flight from France. They boarded the trains lovingly caressing their violins.

The wealthy foreigners who want to go to America, the home of freedom, find the mental suspension of transcontinental travel makes this impossible. Ingenious citizens are obtaining passports for London as fast as the trains can take them, but thousands still remain in Paris, hoping to get out on French liners some time this month. The difficulties they encounter in obtaining money are increasing daily, but one and all are holding together with a fine spirit of camaraderie. The more fortunate ones are giving aid wherever possible. The only gleam of humor in Paris today was provided by Herman Ahlherr, deaf, of New York, a tourist who was temporarily arrested as a spy because the policeman thought his special acoustician apparatus was a wireless transmitter.

No Parcel Post to Germany or France

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4.—This notice has been issued by the postoffice department:

"The postal administration of France and Germany having informed the postoffice department that the parcel post service between those countries and the United States is suspended until further notice, postmasters must decline to receive parcel post packages for mailing to said countries until further advised. Such parcels must be held for the countries named, and the sender notified, or which may be mailed subsequently hereafter. Full information will be furnished, and the postage promptly refunded to the sender."

CABLES SEVERED.

VLADISTOK, Aug. 4.—All cables between British, German and Chinese harbors have been cut. Martial law has been proclaimed here.

'On to Berlin' Cry Just 44 Years Old

"On to Berlin!"

Forty-four years ago today they sang this song in the cafes of Paris, and they cried it in the boulevards and they cried it in the streets—there was going to be "nothing to it."

The French soldiers of forty years ago were provided with little books in French and German. These little books were evidently intended for use in Germany only. They were not like the little books you find today in the variety stores for "conversations." From them the French soldier was to learn how to say helpful little things in German:

"Which is the road to Berlin?"

"How far is the Rhine?"

"Bring bread, wine, fowl, soup, at once."

And, if you have not forgotten all you once read about the Franco-German war, you know that the French soldiers never felt the need of this German-to-Glance, for they never passed the Rhine.

When the wires told briefly on Sunday the story of the German invasion of the little duchy of Luxemburg, the world was amazed. Chrstendom had scarce begun to realize that this general war was on, and here was the German army on the French frontier, 240 miles west of Berlin and not much more than 150 miles east of Paris.

Well, so it was in 1870, the big difference being that the declaration of war on that occasion came from France, while while the aggressor nation, turned out to be entirely unprepared.

The third Napoleon declared war on the German on the 19th day of July. Three days before that King William of Germany had issued mobilization orders. Ten days there were 384,000 fighting Germans on and in front of the Rhine.

WRECK AT BEGINNING.

The French army of that day was a wreck at the beginning. It had entered upon a campaign without plans, conditions, supplies, transportation, maps. The officers were plentifully supplied with maps of Germany, to be sure—which they never needed—but they were without maps of the French provinces. And on French soil all the battles took place.

It is at least a striking coincidence that the Germans of today appear to have started over the very route in Paris that they took in 1870.

The month—August—and the DAY of the month, correspond almost to T, the only marked difference being that the Germans appear today to be almost as near to Paris as they were on the first day of September, 1870, when Sedan fell and Napoleon III and his army were taken prisoners.

Observe these dates:

Engagement at Weissenberg ..... Aug. 4, 1870

Battle of Worth ..... Aug. 6, 1870

Battle of Spicheren ..... Aug. 6, 1870

Battle of Colombey-Nouilly ..... Aug. 14, 1870

Battle of Vionville-Mars-la-Tour ..... Aug. 16, 1870

Battle of Gravelotte-St Privat ..... Aug. 18, 1870

Battle of Beaumont ..... Aug. 30, 1870

Battle of Sedan ..... Sept. 1, 1870

In four weeks and after only two battles, the French Empire had crumbled.

Then came the long siege of Paris, the terrors of the Commune, but there was not until May 10 of the following year that the Treaty of Peace was ready to be signed.

For forty years the world has been hoping that there would never be another war like it, for in 1870 the Germans — the victors!—lost 6,247 officers and 123,453 men.

The victors?

MAKES WORLD WONDER.

The first engagement of the French-German war took place on the soil of Alsace-Lorraine.

Alsace-Lorraine originally Germany, had been in the hands of the French for 200 years. In 1871 it was taken from France by force of arms, and ever since the French people, in spite of the newspapers being printed in German, have been restless.

The task of Emperor William's army was somewhat simpler than that of his grandfather in 1870, for the present War Lord of Germany was not fighting to get Alsace-Lorraine. The modern William, indeed, struck straight through the duchy of Luxemburg, whose ruler is a woman, a girl nineteen years old, and it is not believe such disgraceful a act as

DESCRIPTION OF BATTLE.

Today is the anniversary of the battle of Weissenberg, August 4, 1870, with which the Franco-German war really opened.

On this day Field-Marshal von Bose, in the "The Franco-German War of 1870-71," the total corps of the Third Army, consisting of 125 battalions, 102 squadrons cavalry and 30 batteries, which had been encamped during the night on the heights to the French frontier and advanced on a wide front to the banks of the Lauter, from Weissenburg to Lauterburg. This began more opportunities for a long defence, but on August 4 only one weak division and a cavalry brigade belonging to the first French Corps covered this sector, the main body of that corps being still on the march toward the Palatinate.

The Bavarians, forming the right wing, encountered a lively resistance before the exposed walls of Weissenburg the first thing in the morning. But very soon after the Prussian corps crossed the Lauter further down the river. General Von Bose led the Eleventh Corps up the Geisberg in order to outflank the French right wing, while General von Kirchbach, with the Fifth Corps, advanced against the enemy's front.

Thirty field pieces had at the same time drawn up against the railway station at Weissenburg. That and the town were subsequently taken after a bloody combat.

By 10 o'clock General Douay had ordered a retreat, which was seriously threatened by the advancement against the Geisberg; and the castle of that name, a very formidable fortress, was most obstinately defended to enable the French to retire. The generalissimo of the seventh King's Regiment stormed it repeatedly, with immense loss, but in vain, for did the garrison surrender until, with the greatest difficulty, artillery had been dragged to the summit.

The French division, which had been attacked by three German corps, effected a retreat after an exhausting struggle, though in great disorder, having suffered much loss. Its gallant commander had been killed.

The Germans had also suffered a proportionately considerable loss: Nearly one officers and 1,469 men were killed. General von Kirchbach was wounded while fighting in the foremost ranks.

And on this forty-fourth anniversary, what is going to happen? FRENCH AGAIN SURPRISED.

Again the French have been crying, "On to Berlin!" which is 500 miles east from their capital.

Again they have been surprised to find 300,000 fighting Germans on the French frontier, 250 miles on the way from Berlin to Paris, but only 150 miles out.

The dates correspond and the William of today has actually taken the road to Paris pursued by the fighting men of his grandsire!

What will happen on this anniversary of Weissenberg and how soon will the censors permit us to know about it?

BOYS AND GIRLS JOIN KAISER'S COLORS

GERMANS READY TO MAKE ANY SACRIFICE

By FRITZ JACOBSON.

BERLIN, Aug. 4.—The German people entered with calm resolution into the mighty war forced upon them by their jealous enemies. Factional strife is forgotten and the nation is united, ready to sacrifice everything for the fatherland.

Demonstrations in cities and towns are characterized by profound earnestness. Nowhere is to be found noisy jingoism of vulgar hatred or cries for revenge. All demonstrations are full of dignity, even solemnity, and all classes are filled with patriotic ardor.

BOYS AND GIRLS OFFER SERVICES.

Young men are going by tens of thousands to join the colors, although they are under military age, and thousands of girls are offering their services to the Red Cross to assist in nursing the sick and wounded.

A powerful demonstration took place in the form of a divine service at the Bismarck monument. Men and women attended to the number of hundreds of thousands. No head remained unbared and many women sobbed when the band began to play the Dutch prayer of thanks.

Field Chaplain Reverend Doring preached a sermon full of high patriotism and confidence in God. His text was from St. John—"Faithful unto death."

With great solemnity the throng followed the discourse and when the clergyman pronounced benediction and the blessing for the German arms his hearers folded their hands and murmured the "Our Father."

DAYS FOR GENERAL PRAYER.

Emperor William ordered that yesterday and today be set apart as days for general prayer, and proclaimed his thanks to the people for their loyalty and patriotism.

The sovereign says in his proclamation that in these trying times he has to count upon the support of the people and admonishes them not to interrupt him in his work by demonstrations.

In ordering the days of prayer he repeats that he had tried up to the last moment to preserve peace and had drawn the sword only to ward off a wholly unjustified attack.

GIVES FULL AMNESTY.

The same decree gives full amnesty for all military culprits whose sentences do not exceed five years. The Grand Duke of Hesse has proclaimed an extended amnesty.

The mobilization advances with wonderful precision. Despite tremendous traffic at the terminals, there never was any blockade. The assembly and transportation of the troops called to the colors go on without a hitch, showing how perfect is the organization of the army.

Mobilization has caused the greatest enthusiasm. Every one realizes that this is the hour for patriotic sacrifice and is preparing to give up all his possessions to the cause.

The Reichstag will assemble again tomorrow in historic session. All deputies are coming back. No party lines will be drawn. All appropriations for the government will be authorized without opposition. There is no factionalism, not even with the Socialists.

The Chancellor will confer today with the leaders of all parties.

SPY SHOT AT CONSTANZE.

At Constanze a spy attempted to blow up the aeroplane shed. He was shot.

Cities are taking measures to prevent exorbitant prices for food. Frankfort-on-Main has given two million marks for this purpose. Alix is to circulate half a million, Metz three millions, and Cologne six millions.

The latest passengers to arrive from Paris tell of great difficulties encountered. Forty thousand Germans have already left Paris.

Conforming to the federal constitution, the Kings of Bavaria, Wurtemberg and Saxony have tendered the command over their armies to the Emperor, and the Grand Duke of Mecklenburg-Strelitz and Duke Ernest August of Brunswick, son-in-law of the Emperor, will go to war in person.

So far 2,000 marriages, due to war emergency, have taken place. All needy families of reservists who have gone to war will be supported by the State.

MARIE AT COPENHAGEN.

COPENHAGEN, Aug. 4.—Dowager Empress Marie of Russia reached here today. She will endeavor to reach Russia via Sweden and Finland.

AVIATOR DROPS BOMBS.

PARIS, Aug. 4.—A German aviator dropped three bombs over Luneville today from a height of 4,500 feet. His aim was poor and no great damage was done.

TURKS MOBILIZE.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Aug. 4.—The reservists of the Ottoman army and navy were ordered to mobilize today.

HOLD BRITISH SHIP.

GIBRALTAR, Aug. 4.—The Orient liner Otway, with passengers and mails from Australia, arrived here today and was ordered to remain in port.

PIRATES HERE TO PLAY FOUR-GAME SERIES WITH PENNANT CHASING BRAVES

BIKERS CLASH IN BIG CARD OF RACES AT REVERE OVAL TONIGHT

BRAVES BATTLE PIRATES

— BY NICK FLATLEY

Welcome to our city, Pittsburgh Pirates.

It's about time the Braves had a shot at some easy games. They certainly have earned it. Six games in a row from pennant possibilities and title-a-day Boston belligerents is some say-die Boston belligerents is some sort of a let-up.

As a result of the wildest week of baseball in the history of the present season, the Braves are right in the thick of things. They had to fight, tooth and nail every playing minute, to keep on top during, but fight they did.

While hair-raising finishes and last ditch victories are glorious to watch and fine to talk about, a team that is headed toward a flag needs a little rest once in a while.

The arrival of the Pirates should allow a slight bit of easing up for the Stallings tribe.

Right through the season the Braves have been whacking the everlasting tar out of the Clarke pupils. As the Braves were never known to do well, or the today's enemy so poorly when they met on previous occasions, when they met on previous occasions, as it at present the case, small wonder there's a happy spirit reigning in the Boston camp.

GIANTS MEET CUBS.

Nor is the fact that the Cubs and the Giants start a big battle over in New York this afternoon anything of a damper. Nothing in the world could be better for the Braves. If they can keep the Jinx pinned on Pittsburgh, as no doubt they will, they're sure to gain on somebody up ahead, probably on both first and second place holders.

They're only seven and a half games away from the Giants now and so close to both Cardinals and Cubs that any day is liable to see another step toward the roof encompassed.

The line-up of the leaders at present is as follows:

	W.	L.	Behind Leaders.
New York.....	53	37
Chicago.....	52	43	3½ games
St. Louis.....	54	46	5½ games
Boston.....	46	45	7½ games

With sixty-three games still to play, eleven with the Giants in the list, a seven and a half game margin is not at all anything to worry the South End climbers.

On July 5th the Braves were exactly fifteen games back of the Giants. In a month they have cut that seemingly impossible lead exactly in half.

Another month of good Brave baseball will have things lined up for one of the greatest series ever played in this particular neck of the woods when the Giants open up a four-game series here Labor Days.

In the immediate future, however, the Cardinals seem to have ahead of them as easy a time as the Braves, for their next four assays are over in Brooklyn. Against the Dodgers this season to date, the Cardinals have romped away with eleven of twelve battles.

PIRATES ALWAYS EASY.

As there's no reason to indicate that the Cardinals will slump, even though they did drop four in a row to the Braves, passing the westerners may be held up a few days. After the Brooklyn series, the Cards go to New York, where they, pastime, while the locals are entertaining the Reds. At that interesting period we shall see, we shall see.

Reverting to the present peril, if such be, it may be recalled that last time the Pirates played Boston four wins were chalked up for the Braves. Also out in Smoky City a short time ago, the Gaffneys gathered in four of five, all four victories being shutout affairs.

A repetition of history would come in very handy. Incidentally the game will be played at the Walpole Street yard, not at Fenway Park.

The week-day crowds have not yet acquired sufficient size to make this move a necessity.

In today's battle we are very likely to see Dick Rudolph trot out to try and pull down his eighth straight win. Sir Richard landed a couple of victories last week, making his final appearance Friday.

RUDOLPH TO PITCH.

While three days is rather short rest for a much worked twirler, Rudolph is strong as a horse and anxious to work. Further, Stallings is a strong believer in playing his string out while he has things feeling fine and right, and if Ruddy warms up well he'll be shot in.

However, there are plenty of other pitchers who should win, the way the team is going, waiting around for a chance to show their wares.

Bob Harmon, the only pitcher on the hostile list who has been going right along like a regular twirler, will probably try to cause the hoodoo that has afflicted the Pirates whenever they have encountered the Braves.

Everybody up for four more to that winning string.

Cherokees Seek Games.

SHORE PICKED TO PITCH FOR RED SOX TODAY

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Aug. 4.—The pennant hopes of the Red Sox received another severe shock here yesterday when the second game of the series was dropped to the Browns, 6 to 1.

It looks very much as though Carrigan's outfit is failing the way many other clubs have done, losing just when they have a grand chance to gain on the opposite club.

And it was just that kind of a chance Bill Carrigan's chaps blew yesterday. With the Athletics losing to the White Sox, the Hub town aggregation had a glorious chance to gain a full game on the Mackmen and bring the lead down to 6½ games.

Instead of that, they are now seven games behind and all because the battlers are not getting hits in the pinches. That has lost two games for the Sox here in St. Louis. Whenever a batter gets to the plate with a chance to count a mate he falls down.

This happened twice yesterday. In the fifth inning with two on Forest Cady and Vean Gregg were easy victims. Then in the sixth Larry Gardner had a chance to break up the game. Larry came to the plate with two on and two gone. His best was a pop to Pratt.

"We are not hitting the ball," said Manager Carrigan after the second straight defeat had been administered to his outfit. "We get men on the bases, but the batter fails to get the ball out of the infield. If he does get it out of the infield, it usually is a high fly to some outfielder.

"But we are going to win a lot of ball games before the campaign is ended. Speaker and Lewis will start hitting pretty soon again. They are in a slump right now, but watch out when they start poling them out again.

"I am not one bit discouraged with the work of Vean Gregg. He has not done well since joining us, but he will capture a lot of games for my team before the season is ended. The Browns just happened to get next to his offerings and then you have to take into consideration that every pitcher, no matter how great he is, has an off day every now and then. Yesterday happened to be Vean's bad one.

"The next time I pitch him he may come through with a great exhibition. I have no alibi to render. We are not hitting the ball and that is all there is to it.

"Then leave me tell you something. These Browns are getting some great pitching. Wellman uncorked a wonderful game Sunday. While Bill James came through with another fine performance. The Browns are also playing an improved game. In the other series we played with them. Manager Dunn, the softest kind of sledings, but they have certainly shown us something in the two games so far."

Carrigan's outfield lost yesterday's game in the sixth round when the Brownies got after Gregg for five hits. A base on balls, three singles and a wild throw by Hoblitzel gave the markers.

Manager Carrigan probably will send Shore, the right-hander secured from the Baltimore Club recently, to the hill in the third game of the series today. Hamilton is down to hurl for the Browns.

OVER THE PLATE

By NICK FLATLEY

LOOKS like Fenway Park and another record crowd for the Braves next Saturday. If they keep on going, the Red Sox lot will be taxed to accommodate the crowd that will be out rooting for a pennant winner. Yesterday's gain on both Chicago and St. Louis makes the Walpole outfit like a pretty sure thing for second place, for a while at all events.

FOR three pitchers to carry a team through an entire week of victories is quite an accomplishment nowadays. Boss Stallings claims that his prize trio will be able to last the season out with very little outside assistance, if need be. Hope he's right.

* * *

JOET CONNOLLY, of the Braves, claims that there's nothing to it now, but Fenway Park for the Braves. October 7 in the opening game of the world's series. Twould be a good idea for the fans to commence saving their rain checks to further their claims for good seats at the big setup. We offer the suggestion with all seriousness.

* * *

GEORGE STALLINGS is very much opposed to the practice of pulling young pitchers out the moment they show any signs of faltering. He says:

"The only way to find out what's in a chap is to let him stay in there and take his medicine. If he bucks up and tries to avert disaster, there's hope for him. But if he lets down in any kind of a pinch, I'd not want to have anything to do with him."

* * *

LARRY GILBERT, the outfielder who has been in New Orleans for the past few weeks, rejoins the Boston team tomorrow. He was called to the southern city while the team was on the road by the illness of his wife. Mrs. Gilbert is now on the road to recovery. Larry will be a good man to have around as he was sticking close to .300 when he left. He will likely supplant Mann in centerfield.

* * *

TYLER and Griner had so much stuff on the ball yesterday that more strikes were called on batters than usually is the case in a week. Umpire Quigley had a tough job on his hands watching the sharp curves and stopping arguments. His decisions, however, seemed pretty generally correct. The players who had been victims unfortunately had to put up the customary protest alibi, for the sake of the crowd.

* * *

HAVE you noticed how happy the Braves players are after they've pulled a heart-breaking game out of the fire? They jump around and congratulate one another for all the world like the members of a college football team after the big game with the hated rival. Shows the bunch have their hearts in their work.

* * *

PERHAPS the present plight of both the Cleveland and Pittsburgh teams illustrates the great failure of trying to build a ball club around one man. Larry Lajoie and Hans Wagner, the two greatest individual stars the game has ever known, are both mere ghosts of their former selves, so far as baseball is concerned. Their clubs are hopelessly out of their respective races. Had young stars been developed, who could fill in properly for the fading great, such might not be the case.

* * *

WONDER if the passing of Larry will take the nap out of the Naps?

* * *

THAT three-day series between the Braves and the Giants, which starts over in New York August 15, is likely to cut a whole lot of ice in the National League race. So also is a three-game setto, which opens in Boston Labor Day. But even more important, if our heroes keep to their knitting, it will be the final clash of the pair, which winds up in the Big Town just three days before the season closes. The Carrigan on that auspicious series play five games in four days.

Briscoe Car $750 to $900

With electric lighting generator and self-starter, top, windshield and speedometer.

The First French Car at an American Price

THREE years ago I conceived the idea of the Briscoe car. It was to build, for less than a thousand dollars, a really high-grade small car—a car of as fine material, with as great care in workmanship, of as assured reliability, and of as highly finished artistic appearance as any of the best and highest priced large cars; a car built right, whose artistic lines would take it out of the ordinary, cheap, clap-trap, uncomely, low-value class, and thus singularly appeal to the discriminating buyer.

So I called several engineers together—men who had already designed American cars which were famous for the value they gave. I told them I must have a car that embodied these ideals not speed, was to be the watchword. And I arranged to be with them day and night until the Briscoe car was completed. We knew the best American methods, these men and I, for we had been responsible for many successes here. So we went to Europe, where we could study the best of several foreign practices and methods.

Million Dollar Factory Behind Car

Today the public very wisely thinks of the factory, the men, the organization and the ideals back of a car. In these the Briscoe acknowledges supremacy to none. It is the output of combined facilities at Jackson, Michigan, which have reached a very high standard in their various fields. This group of plants is now equipped with over $1,000,000 worth of the best automobile making machinery—a motor plant 700,000—line cutter, an axle plant 250,000, a large and perfectly equipped drop forge plant, a spring and rear-shaft plant. All of these are grouped in the same 30-acre tract, and are supervised by experts in their respective lines, and the methods of the Briscoe car have gone through the entire line of the industry. They are thoroughly trained and conscientious workmen—the skill and the quality of automobile construction, but endowed with an large a fund of personal experience as is possessed by any other set of men in the entire industry.

And there, in laboratories, at Billancourt, near Paris, we finally worked out and produced this "first French car at an American price," the finished masterpiece of leading French and American engineers, who for more than a year collaborated with us in its production.

This is the story of the Briscoe car.

Not Experiment that Produced the Briscoe Car

It was not experimenting in this case—the slapping together of a varied collection of material to catch a season's market. It was rather experience that built the Briscoe car—a finished product of several years' careful investigation and study; the concentrated effort of prominent engineers from three of the famous automobile producing countries of the world—tried and proven under every conceivable practical test both abroad and at home.

I will stake my reputation of fifteen years of successful automobile building upon the performance of this Briscoe car.

GALLANT MEETS MURPHY IN BIG BOUT TONIGHT

ATLAS A. A. PROGRAM.

Gilbert Gallant vs. Eddie Murphy, twelve rounds.

Tommy M'Farland vs. Larry Burns, eight rounds.

Johnny Fallon vs. Johnny Murphy, six rounds.

Joe Vargus vs. Johnny Noonan, six rounds.

By JACK CONWAY.

BOSTON'S sport lovers will forget the great European war this evening long enough to make a trip to the Atlas A. A.'s quarters at the Arena to see Gilbert Gallant and Eddie Murphy battle in a twelve-round bout. The tussle has aroused a tremendous amount of interest in South Boston, Chelsea and their suburbs and as a result a large crowd of the faithful is sure to be numbered among those present when the fireworks are set off.

Be it known to all whom it may concern that Gallant and Murphy are two of our classiest young lightweights. Both young men are former New England lightweight champions, and each of them believes he possesses enough kick to win back the high honors in his class, which are now on exhibition in Matty Baldwin's trophy room down in Lynnfield.

Tonight's bout will be the third contest between Gallant and Murphy. These boys met a year ago and Murphy won the decision. Gallant then made a tour of the Pacific Coast and when he returned home he hurled a challenge at Murphy. As the boys were old rivals, it was not a difficult task to arrange a tussle between them. Gallant surprised the wise men in that encounter and won by a wide margin.

MURPHY is of the opinion that he will be able to come back this evening and atone for the setback he received at the hands of the husky Chelsea youth. He claims he did not prepare properly for his last encounter with Gallant and that this caused him to lose a great deal of the speed which had enabled him to outclass Gallant in their bout a year ago.

Murphy does not lack backers for tonight's "go." His many admirers contend that his speed, skill and ring generalship will enable him to outpoint Gallant and that when the contest terminates the referee will be obliged to award the decision to the Peninsular lad.

Murphy says that if he does not win from Gallant he will quit the ring. But Eddie has not any intention of being conquered by the little Frenchman if such a thing can be avoided.

"GALLANT is confident he will again prove Murphy's master. He says he will try and land a knockout punch inside of the limit, as he insists on forcing Baldwin to meet him at a return engagement. "Gil" is not as clever as Murphy, but he is almost as fast. He is also a harder puncher than the South Boston boy, and is very effective at in-fighting. We will pit his punch and aggressiveness against Murphy's skill and speed and he is not worrying a great deal about the outcome of the clash.

ALEX. MEEAN and George Freeman, who manage Gallant and Murphy respectively, stated today that their proteges are ready at the weight. McLean asserted that Gallant has been below 135 pounds in weight the men agreed to make for the match, for several days and that he could reduce to 125 pounds if necessary.

Murphy, on the other hand, does his best work at 135 pounds. When he is at this weight, he is a hard man to beat, as it means that he is in the best of condition and with his fight under his belt as it were. If he reduced to 133 pounds he would be obliged to weaken himself, but at 135 pounds he is a graceful boxer and a dangerous puncher. He will need all of his strength tonight if he is to hold Gallant at bay and will also be obliged to travel at a merry clip throughout the twelve rounds. The fight favors Gallant's chances, as he is the cleverer of the two boys and is better free in his footwork.

CHAMPIONS OF SPRINT GAME RACE TONIGHT

Two sprint champions, Caesar Moretti and Frank Cavanaugh, will meet in a special match race at the Revere cycle track tonight. The event will be decided best two in three heats.

Sharing interest with this feature will be a twenty-mile motor-paced race, in which Jimmy Moran, Vincent Madono and Worth Mitten will be the riders; a tandem race between teams composed of Herbert-Barry and Connolly-Drobach, and the regular list of professional and amateur events.

The race between Cavanaugh and Moretti has been anxiously awaited. It has been delayed four times on account of rain. They have met once since Moretti's invasion of this country. Cavanaugh won on this occasion, but Moretti claims that the drive star was aided in his victory by another American rider. This charge Cavanaugh resents and declares he will show that he won entirely through his own efforts by again taking the Italian's measure tonight. The outcome should be one of the best sprint matches ever staged at Revere.

The work of Madone in the motor-paced race will be closely watched. It will be his first tryout over the long route. This youngster grew into sudden favor with the "fans" at the Revere track several weeks ago, when he dashed off five miles with the ease and gracefulness of a veteran.

Freeman Starts on Coast Hike Tomorrow

Leonard Freeman, who has gained some fame both here and abroad as a long distance walker, has completed his plans for a coast to coast hike and will start from the Boston Common tomorrow morning on the first leg of his long grind.

Freeman declares he is out to break the record of 105 days, and plans to support himself en route by the sale of his photographs. The walk as mapped out by Freeman will take him in about every big city and town along the line, although an average of forty miles a day will have to be covered to even equal the old record.

Boston Printers Win Over Philadelphia

CINCINNATI, Aug. 4.—The Boston team had but little trouble in winning its first game of the series for the championship of the Union Printers' National Baseball League, and the boys are now confident of going through to the title. The Hub printers defeated Philadelphia, 13 to 6. Bob Murray pitched for Boston after Jack Smith had struck the first man in the first inning.

Municipal Games at William Eustis Park

On Saturday afternoon the next preliminary track meet under the auspices of the park and recreation department will be held at the William Eustis Playground, Roxbury. The meet is open to residents of Roxbury, North Dorchester, Jamaica Plain and Forest Hills. These districts embrace the William Eustis, Hillings field, Columbus Avenue, Washington Street and Forest Hills playgrounds, and already the number of entries which have been received insure keen competition in each event.

Twelve More White Trucks Purchased by Gimbel Brothers

GIMBEL BROTHERS, one of New York City's largest department stores, has just placed an order for twelve more WHITE TRUCKS, of 3 tons, 1½ tons, and ¾ ton capacity.

THIS MAKES A TOTAL OF 54 WHITE TRUCKS NOW OWNED BY GIMBEL BROTHERS, USED FOR HANDLING THEIR VAST DELIVERY SERVICE IN THE METROPOLITAN DISTRICT.

This installation of 54 WHITE TRUCKS by Gimbel Brothers is an example of the rapidly growing tendency of firms who use large numbers of motor trucks to standardize their equipment with one make of truck.

And when these firms finally cease experimenting, and decide upon one truck as standard, that truck is almost invariably WHITE.

Edith Is Mortified and Indignant as a Result of What Ralph Lets Her Believe.

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER

CHAPTER XVII.

RALPH MORTON remained standing by the piano after Edith had left him. His back was turned to the hall where the guests and hosts were chatting merrily. Unfolding the message the girl had handed him, he read and re-read it. He was mortified when he noticed that his hand trembled as he held the slip of paper.

"Your cousin brought money. F. saw him. Thinks it was you. Be on your guard.—E. P."

And Edith had seen this! He caught his breath in consternation as he appreciated this fact, then sighed with relief as he recalled their recent conversation. How fortunate that he had spoken the truth! He had acknowledged that "E. P." was Mrs. Evelyn Price and that he knew her husband's name was Ferdinand.

What else had Edith asked him? Oh, yes—if Tom knew Mrs. Price. He did not blame himself for acknowledging that Tom did know her. How could he have been truthful and said otherwise?

The laughing and talking in the hall broke in upon his musings. He felt, as Evelyn had felt less than an hour ago, that he must get away from all these people for a while. Glancing down the room he saw that one of the long French windows at the rear, opening upon the veranda, was open. He strolled toward it and stepped from the brilliantly lighted interior out into the dusk of the Spring night.

The back veranda faced the orchard and the soft wind wafted to him the odor of the blossoming fruit trees. The moonlight flooded the lawns and made the place look like fairyland.

Even Ralph Morton, absorbed as he was in thoughts of himself and his own schemes, paused to draw in a long breath of sweetness and to note the beauty of the night. Going down the steps he began to walk up and down the asphalted walk leading out toward the garage. Here, at least, he could be quiet and think.

He had read the telegram twice and now repeated to himself every phrase of it. He must be sure of the explanation he was to give Edith. What about the money? How could he explain the claim about that? How could he tell her that he had borrowed it from Mrs. Price and sent Tom to return it?

An idea flashed upon him so suddenly that he came to an abrupt standstill. Mrs. Price had not intimated that the money had come from him. She had simply said that the cousin had brought the money. Moreover, the money was no his, but Tom's—for he (Ralph) had not had the money to pay the debt, so Tom has supplied it.

HEADACHE? CONSCIENCE

But what reason could he give for Evelyn's wrath? A caution to himself, Ralph Morton, he could suggest that as Mrs. Price knew neither of the cousins, and had heard his wife speak of having met Ralph, he had jumped to the conclusion that Tom was Ralph. He need tell only enough to exonerate. He could even claim that he had no right to pry into Tom's affairs.

Edith would be too proud to ask many questions. Her imagination would supply details which he might seem to hesitate to give. The nature of the case would make her shrink from too close investigation, and she would attribute any silence on his part to loyalty to Tom.

Loyalty to Tom! For a moment he felt a slight qualm of conscience. Then he quieted it with a mild indignation at Tom's having bungled the whole affair, as he evidently had done. What a blunderer Tom was! A boy of fifteen could have managed the matter better! Impatience, stimulated and stimulated resentment and indignation until he made himself believe that he felt both.

Dr. Macdougall Hay speaks of conscience as the "inner voice" that speaks to God. Sometimes men use self-deception or self-justification as a key to unlock the knowledge of God's will on but little trouble in doing this. He had used the key so often that he found it easy to open the door behind which he needed it tonight. With a thrill of self-congratulation he turned and started toward the house. Entering by the window by which he had gone out, he crossed the drawing room and reached the hall as the guests were making a general departure. Several motor cars were drawn up in front of the house. The girls were hurrying up to the dressing room to don their wraps.

"I have just been out in the garden for a few puffs of a cigarette," Ralph remarked to his host. "It is a heavenly night. Perhaps someone had told you so. It was well to tell the truth when one could do so with safety.

"Indeed, it is a fine night," remarked Mr. Hale, looking out of the open front door. "There is a glorious moon." He called back as he stepped out upon the porch. "You fellows inside are missing it."

All the men except Ralph followed him. Edith spoke to Constance in a low voice. "Will you go upstairs to the dressing room with the girls?" she asked. "If so, I will stay down here."

"Certainly," agreed Constance, joining the group in the stairs.

EDITH'S MORTIFIED

Mrs. Hale had gone to the rear of the house to give some forgotten order for the morning, and Ralph and Edith were thus left alone. The girl laid a trembling hand on the man's arm.

"You read the telegram?" she asked.

He covered her hand with his own, holding hers close. "Yes, dear," he replied. "I am sorry you should have seen it."

"I am not," she said. "I knew there were women who were not good—and that there were women like the one that——"

She paused, covering her eyes with her free hand. "Oh," she shuddered, "such things make me hate life!"

"But, Edith," he suggested, "you don't understand the telegram."

She dropped her hand from her eyes and faced him, her lips trembling.

"Listen," she said, trying to steady her voice, "I understand enough to know that Tom has done something about which I don't want to hear, that he used your name for a shield and that the—the woman—had an alibi is—was just good enough to warn you of this. Probably she and Tom have quarrelled—perhaps because of his engagement. Perhaps he has tried to buy her off."

"Oh"—snatching her hand from his cheek and twisting her fingers together in an agony of mortification—"the shame of it all! That I should have trusted him! What will the people who are saying that I am engaged to him think now if they know?"——

She paused for the girls were coming along the upper hall toward the stairs.

"Why not let them think," the man said hurriedly and softly, "that you are engaged to ME? Why not, darling?"

(To Be Continued.)

It Often Happens

Jones was taking his holiday at the end of May. Robinson's holiday was not due until September.

When, therefore, Robinson called at the Joneses' one evening for a friendly chat, the master of the house tried to wax eloquent at his expense—to tantalize and make him envious.

In a few days' time Jones was going off on his holiday—a fourteen-day circular sea trip—leaving his wife and family at home.

"How delightful it will be," he said, addressing Robinson, "all day long to inhale the invigorating ozone of the sea! The sea—beautiful sea! Oh, I long for it—long to breathe in great draughts of that air! Why, I shall want to stand every moment of the voyage on the prow of the ship with my mouth open——"

At this moment Mrs. Jones chirped in. "Till then she had been sitting at the window demurely sewing. "And, dear," she said, "I expect you will. I remember what happened at Atlantic City last Summer, that day we went out sailing."

One or the Other

"What is the most aggravating thing in married life?" asked Dorothy.

"Sometimes," said the bachelor friend, "it's the husband and sometimes it's the wife."

Birds of a Feather

No. 1—THE PEACOCK

By NELL BRINKLEY

THE lovely gardens of the world are undone without a peacock. And even though you may hold it of little use—still is the world without a brilliant note in its song of life if there were no Peacock Lady—gorgeous of hue—crested—and filling her setting—satisfying the hungry eye that roves and delights in beauty—a gem.

And though I have given her a polished mirror, the dictionary (so it does) says hotly that the peacock is no vainer bird than any other. And yet when it puts all this after the name—"gorgeous of hue, radiating and pulsing with the moving tints of the rainbow, green and gold, and blue and bronze, carrying a train of feathers that are eyed in a black-lilac velvet and rustles with the peculiar sound of stiff silk"—why shouldn't they be vain as Narcissus himself?—NELL BRINKLEY.

Their Married Life

HELEN CAN NO LONGER GET ALONG WITHOUT SEEING WINIFRED

Copyright, 1911, International News Service.

"WARREN," began Helen tentatively, "is everything decided about going up to the shore next week?"

"Of course everything is settled. I fixed matters up when we were up there. Now what's the matter? I suppose your dressmaker hasn't sent what you wanted to go. Haven't clothes enough, sarcastically.

"No, dear, you know that I have everything I need, and I like the place very much; it isn't that at all."

"Well, what is it then? That's the worst of you women, you get an idea in your mind and then you have to be coaxed to talk about it. Get it out now—you'll feel better when it's over."

Helen patted the pillows on the couch into place and did not answer. She was thinking of the letter in her dressing table drawer, the letter that she had received only that morning from her mother. It was about Winifred.

"I don't mean to criticise you, my dear," it had said, "but surely you must feel that I am right. Dearly as we love Winifred, your father and I both feel that we are doing wrong to keep her any longer. Mother was different when you and Warren had the chance to go to Europe and when you came back I felt sure that she would be better here with us in the country, but now she is asking for her mother. She is a girl, remember, Helen, and girls need their mothers. Come out and make up a visit—you haven't been here in so long."

Helen had remembered with a rush of mother love all of Winifred's dear little ways as she had read the letter through. Warren had thought it best to wait until Fall to have the child back, but Helen felt that she could not do without her baby any longer; suddenly she came to herself with a start. Warren was speaking.

IT'S ABOUT WINIFRED

"Now, what are you thinking about, mooning off there in the corner? Aren't you going to tell me? I've been waiting here for your confidences for the last five minutes."

"It's about Winifred," said Helen suddenly. "I want her home, Warren. I've decided not to wait until Fall after all."

Warren threw down the paper impatiently. "I thought we thrashed that matter out long ago. The child's a lot better out there in the country than she would be at a Summer hotel. You'll agree to that I suppose."

"Yes, I know she's better out there with mother, but after all this isn't the point. I'm her mother, Warren. Mother reminded me of that fact this morning. I——"

"What's the matter, doesn't your mother want to keep her any longer?" interrupted Warren. "We shall have to come to the point without beating around the bush any longer. Why this sudden desire to have Winifred home when you know she's better off where she is?"

"I've suddenly waked up to the fact that I am missing something," said Helen with sudden heat. "I haven't really known my baby for a year. When I have visited her she has seemed almost like some other woman's little girl. Why she loves mother more now than she does me. I tell you I can't stand it any longer, Warren. I must have Winifred home."

"I suppose you want me to give up our rooms at the Seaview and rush out West just to humor you in one of your moods."

"Why couldn't you let me go? Then we could have Winifred with us at the shore."

"I tell you that I don't believe in taking children to hotels of that kind. Wouldn't it be wiser to wait until later? Then perhaps I could run out with you for a day or so and we could bring Winifred back with us."

Helen hesitated. She felt that Warren's idea was a better one than hers, and yet the two weeks at the Seaview seemed to stretch out endlessly before her. She felt somehow that Warren couldn't understand how she felt.

With bitter resentment at the fact that he was a man and could not understand just how she felt in the matter, she hardly gave him credit for caring for Winifred at all as a father should; she felt somehow the anguish of the moment that he might have offered to spend his vacation with her parents, and yet she knew that there would not be change enough in a vacation of that sort.

HELEN PUTS HER FOOT DOWN

"It isn't as if she were older," said Warren, breaking in on her thoughts suddenly. "She has done well so far, and in my estimation it will be better to leave her there until the weather is cooler."

"But, Warren, you said shortly after we came back from the shore, you won't be put off with any indefinite statement like that. If I agree to leave Winifred with mother a little longer it must be only until a certain time. I want to write mother to this effect immediately."

"What's the use of getting hysterical about it? I said when the weather was cooler, didn't I? How can I tell just when I can get off again? You think a man has nothing to do but walk out of the office any time of all, don't you? Well, get that idea out of your head."

"Can you tell me about when you will go?" said Helen as calmly as she could.

"Not for three or four weeks after we get back. Anyway, probably about the last of September."

"If you can't get away until then will you be willing for me to go there? I haven't been out to see mother since before Christmas, and she has written for me to come out several times."

"Can't you wait until then? What's the use of being in such an all dred hurry? You women are all alike. You must do everything the minute an idea happens to enter your head."

"But Warren, don't you understand that I really want Winifred? I don't want to wait a month or two. I'll write mother to bring her on. If you're not willing that I should go out alone."

"It's funny, isn't it, that you didn't think of all this before. You got a letter from your mother and your conscience smarts a little in consequence, so you have to go to work and raise a perfect devil of a fuss just to get your own way about things."

SHE OFFERS THE LETTER

"Warren, you're unfair; you know that isn't true;" and Helen on the verge of tears got up and left the room suddenly. In her own room she took her mother's letter out of the drawer and hastily skimmed it over. "Winifred sends love to her mummie," were the last words and then a large round wobbly circle meant to indicate a kiss. She thought bitterly of Warren's last words—he was utterly unfair.

When had she tried to shirk her duty as regards Winifred? How many times had she spoken about having the child home only to be silenced by Warren's many arguments for leaving here where she was? Oh, it was unbearable. She wondered vaguely how she had been silenced for so long, why she had gone on with the general run of life while her little girl was far away from her. She remembered how she had hated leaving Winifred even to go abroad.

And then when she and Warren returned the child had not been well and they had thought it best to keep her out of the city for the Winter. Perhaps Warren didn't want to be bothered with Winifred, she reflected with a start. But no, that couldn't be possible. She couldn't be so unfair to him even then.

"Would you like to read the letter?" she said, as she walked back to the living room just as if nothing had happened. Warren scrutinized her closely as she paused for a minute by his chair. Then he took the letter and began to read it without a word about anything. Afterward he put it down, still without speaking.

"I shall run out to see mother as soon as we get back from your vacation," she said with sudden decision, and then: "You know, Warren, that I have spoken of having Winifred home many times before now.

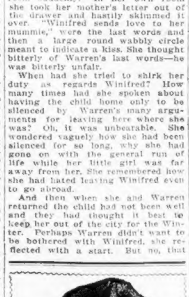
"I'll take a few days off the first week in September," he said, speaking gruffly, "and we'll go out together."

Helen could hardly believe her ears. She might have known that Warren didn't mean what he said.

"Why, dear," she said, slipping an arm around his neck impulsively, "that will be wonderful, if you think you can really spare the time."

"All right," he growled, shaking off her arm impatiently. "You always do have your own way about everything."

Another incident in the lives of Helen and Warren will appear on this page soon.



Mlle. Lea Piron, prima donna of the State Opera, Paris, says: "Savon Cadum has given me most excellent results."

Many women conceal their real beauty behind a coating of cosmetics, powders, creams and lotions, covering their faces with an air-tight coat that clogs the pores and prevents the natural discharge of impurities that lodge in the pores of the skin. The beauty of the skin depends upon a healthy activity of the pores, which must be kept clean so as to enable them to throw off impurities. For this purpose nothing is so good as Savon Cadum, the famous French Complexion Soap. At dept. and drug stores, 50c

Household Hints

For grit in the eye apply a drop or two of castor oil, it relieves the irritation.

If the edges of a saucepan are well buttered the contents will not boil over.

A quick way to clean currants when making cakes is to put the fruit into a colander with a sprinkling of flour and rub it around a few times with your hands. It is surprising how quickly the stalks are separated and come through the small holes.

There is often trouble in getting cream to whip up properly, but if a few drops of lemon juice are added it will soon become thick. Care must be taken not to add too much, as that would make it curdle.

Kettles may be thoroughly cleansed by boiling a few potato peelings in them.

When Tired and Heated

Will strengthen and refresh you. For stomach and bowel ills, fatigue, nervousness, and sleeplessness caused by heat it has no rival worthy of mention.

A delicious combination of ginger, aromatics and French brandy for the relief of cramps, pains, colds, chills, weakness, nervousness and insomnia. Look for the Owl Trade Mark on the wrapper, lest you get a cheap, worthless or dangerous substitute. Forty years the standard of purity, flavor and strength. Sold by all druggists and grocers.

Hard to believe, but absolutely true. A smiling, pleasant face and a rested body —and on washday, too! Women can have these, and the pleasant feeling of having their work well done, if they use Fels-Naptha Soap for washing, for housecleaning, paint, woodwork, greasy pots and pans, sticky dishes, fine glass and silver. It works for you, as well as with you.

Anty Drudge Happens In at the Right Time Once Again

Mrs. Hardwork—"There! I've got to spend the money for more coal. I use gas for everything but washing, but I have to have a fire in the range on washdays; gas is so expensive. I wish there was some way to wash clothes in cold water."

Anty Drudge—"Well, to think I happened in just now. There is a way to wash and be comfortable. Use Fels-Naptha Soap. It's just the medicine you and all tired women need."

Fels-Naptha Soap dissolves grease, takes out all kinds of stains, removes paint from clothes—cleans everything. And does it in cool or lukewarm water, with no hard rubbing or scrubbing.

U. S. HAS BIG GOLD RESERVES

By W. H. ROSS,
Financial Editor.

The task of reopening stock markets is not understood as ever yet. It depends upon developments and contingencies which cannot be foreseen. Trading in stocks under organized auspices will not be renewed until security values are established intrinsically gauged than they were last week while exchanges were doing business.

While alarm may seem taken to discourage, further exportation of gold $2,500,000 was engaged for Europe yesterday, but this on extraordinary demand to help out Americans who are stranded abroad. With $1,900,000,000 of reserve gold and $1,500,000,000 of free gold in the treasury and in fact, this gold exportation in the way of coin or metal are regarded as ample to protect the gold reserve basis of currency. That we owe Europe it is estimated that the exportation of a few millions of gold at this would settle that. The great problem is how to get it to eager customers abroad. Special action by congress on the measure to add a billion dollars to the circulating currency of the United States is expected today.

INVESTORS AWAITING CHANCES.

Many investors are awaiting the reopening of stock exchanges to buy stocks. A New York authority says there was persistent demand for odd lots last week on the decline. Small lot orders exceeded 1,000 shares by 25 per cent. By the time exchanges are reopened there will be a great change in market conditions. It will probably be a long time before foreign trade gets a big American issues. Indeed, if they had a chance they would unpeddled by war to realize, be still selling on this side. After the war is over Europe will have to buy its enormous costs. All its surplus capital will be needed at home for a long time. An important price factor when markets reopen may be further selling of American stocks by owners because of urgent necessities. Although, it is estimated, they disposed of during months of New York during recent months, they still hold American securities to an immense aggregate amount.

COTTON EXCHANGE CLOSED.

The closing of the New York Cotton Exchange is for an indefinite period. Announcement was made as a result of the last day's trading were settled without trouble, but there remained a list of contracts, the suspension of which is almost. It is announced that members may make private trades in the settlement of these contracts, the management desiring to have completely liquidated all outstanding accounts between clearing house members to this end.

It is believed, it is stated, "that before active trading in the new crop will be necessary, enough will be ascertained about the situation to enable the New York Exchange for business, even if speculation be restricted to a minimum for many months."

MAJORITY FOR WARBURG.

It is stated that a majority of the Senate Banking Committee will vote to report favorably upon the nomination of Paul M. Warburg as a member of the Federal Reserve Board. He appeared before the committee yesterday morning and was questioned by Senator Bristow of Kansas, who is understood to be opposed to him. At the most, Washington dispatches say, only three members of the committee will be ready to vote against this New York banker. There are now 3,000,000 reported to be in circulation and its leaders will try hard to obtain unanimity. The nomination will come to the Senate Board fully before the end of the month.

STEEL TRADE IMPROVING.

Although business into definite channels was not satisfactory last week, the latter are having more steel products and the steel industry is improving. Purchasers of railroad equipment have increased, as have orders for other important lines. As set many prices have been reduced, entire field of the European war although a conflict is regarded as guaranteeing American steel trade some advantage. It has temporarily removed one such competitor, Germany, and the American steel companies are counting on support for July as increase in volume of orders, as compared with June. Plants around Youngstown, Ohio, are working on an almost normal scale

No Trouble to Remove Superfluous Hair

Toilet Tips

It is an easy matter to rid the skin of objectionable hair or fuzz, if you proceed as follows: Mix a paste with some water and a little powdered delatone, apply to hairy surfaces and in 2 or 3 minutes rub off, wash the skin and the hairs are gone. This method of banishing hairy growths is painless and does not mar the skin, but to avoid disappointment, be certain to get real delatone. ADVERTISEMENT.

WOMAN HORSE THIEF IN PITIFUL STORY DEFENDS HUSBAND

Mrs. Mabel A. L. Robinson, who admitted stealing a horse, being taken to court by Officer F. Leonard of Mansfield.

ATTLEBORO, Aug. 4.—A dramatic plea was introduced in the assault and affecting story of how her husband vowed upon his mother's grave never to steal again; how, when want pressed them, she begged to be allowed to steal for him; how, at last, he consented, and how she stole a horse and buggy to protect her husband from arrest, was told in the court here today when Mrs. Mabel A. L. Robinson was arraigned as a horse thief.

Mrs. Robinson and her husband, Peter Robinson, were both in court, she was charged with stealing a horse and buggy from the Mansfield Milling Company; he with stealing a buggy and a bicycle and aiding and abetting the stealing of a horse. They pleaded guilty, but the woman asked Judge Charles C. Haggarty:

"Judge, can I say a word?"

The judge nodded. The woman said:

"I stand here today, your honor, telling you the truth. About a year ago my husband was released from jail in New Bedford. He had served four months and he was so penitent that he went straight to his mother's grave and upon his knees vowed that he would never steal again.

"After we were married we started from Canaan, N. H., for Massachusetts, looking for work. Work was hard to find. We came at last to Providence. Our money was gone, and I had no horse, no stallion that I had raised from a colt. I loved the horse—loved it dearly.

"But to feed us and clothe us I sold the horse for $10 to a sales stable.

"We were off again on our hunt. We reached Mansfield and again our money gave out.

"I wanted to steal another horse. My husband refused. I said: 'I'll pick one, that is just dollars and cents to its owner. I wouldn't want any one else to lose a horse they they loved as I loved mine.' But he still protested and reminded me of his oath.

"From house to house we went, begging work, begging food. At last he found employment. I stole a horse—took it from an unlocked stable, hitched it to a buggy and drove away.

"And then I realized we were sure to be caught. I made up my mind I would serve my time and that my husband could be making a home for me while I was in prison. I urged him to leave me. At last he did so. Then I was captured. He came back to throw the officers off the trail."

And Judge Haggerty reserved his decision till tomorrow.

Motor News

By J. C. KERRISON.

The European war, unfortunate though it be, will do much towards advancing the interests of the motor truck industry. Each of the continental powers engaged in the struggle has practically every motor truck within its confines, while some have even seized the most powerful of recent makes for their own use.

These will be placed in war service, made to undergo the rigors and hardships of war, and in short assist in making more mobile than ever the armies of continental Europe.

The result cannot help but be advantageous to the industry, and it is emphatic most emphatically that on long hauls where distance and time are concerned the motor truck is far superior to the old horse-drawn method of transportation.

The army train, upon the reliability of which so much depends, will be a revelation to our friends, the horses and mules of the past being the main relegated to the rear to draw the baggage trains of a large force on the march is concerned.

In the New York motor vehicles and motor cycles were of great value to the English, and in the present struggle the use of the power-driven vehicle will no doubt be considered much more relied upon by a greater degree than ever upon motor vehicles in the transportation of equipage.

* * *

In speaking of the world's production of motor cars, J. H. MacAlman, consular agent of the Stearns, said: "Two-thirds of all the motor cars of the world are owned in the United States. There are now 1,800,000 registered cars in this country. Great Britain is second with 250,000, France third with 52,000, Italy, Russia, thirteen and Liberia, one.

"Many large cities in foreign countries have no motor cars.

"For instance, Canton, China, with its population of 2,000,000, is now awaiting arrival of a vehicle which does not have to be pulled by donkeys.

Following an overland victory in the Dispatch-engineered run of the German Automobile Club, two Overland cars of the current model won much honor for the Overland factory in the recent reliability trials promoted by the Norwegian Automobile Club.

Dispatches state that this Norwegian event was one of the most severe ever attempted in that mountainous country, and the entire field of twenty-three starters, only six cars, including the two Overlands, were able to complete the run with non-stop records.

Why Cadum Is Good for Skin Diseases

The important thing in treating many skin diseases is to keep water away from the inflamed parts and make the covering as air tight as possible. This according to a very distinguished French physician, seems to kill the germs and set up the healing process. Cadum, the well-known skin remedy, applies that idea to the letter and keeps out the air. This covering consists of Cadum's own white wax, which Cadum contains. Two other ingredients of Cadum are zinc oxide, which dries up the water that comes from the sores, and oil of rade, which is one of the oldest and best known remedies for eczema. Physicians everywhere employ oil of rade more often, perhaps, than any other one thing in treating eczema. Cadum costs 50c for a trial box, while the 25c box contains nearly four times as much as the 10c size.

CLEVER BILL PRESENTED AT B. F. KEITH'S

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

The human form divine is not the least attractive feature of the variety spectacle "Neptune's Garden of Living Statues," which was returned to Keith's with augmented forces after a year's tour of the continent.

This tank show is a combination of diving, disappearances, dancing and singing. The scene is a French garden with several groups of statues surrounding a fountain. There is a plot, but it isn't essential. Suffice it that the statues come to life and dive into the fountain, that dancers perform in the classic manner and Gertrude Tripp as Amphitrite sings brilliantly. The statues and humans who have vanished in the pool reappear in different costumes after a long interval. It is very wonderful.

"Patsy," in which Eleanor Gordon, Wilson Melrose, Mrs. George Hibbard, Francesca Rotoli and Franklyn Searight are featured, is held over from last week, and is an amusing little comedy, well acted.

The Farrell-Taylor trio presented a minstrel musical act that is scientifically funny, and measured by the plause, seemed as much to the taste of the audience as anything on the bill.

Billy Halligan and Dama Sykes in a conventional song and patter act, were entertaining. Carl McCullough's burlesque imitations of celebrated performers seemed to please.

An agreeable number was the Colonial Operatic Four in popular operatic and classical selections. Norman Telma, a contortionist, who exhibited a game of billiards the excise for his misuse of his figure, drew considerable laughter. His act has the merit of novelty.

Cook, who is a brilliant performer upon the accordion, is an importation from Italy. "Les Jumbs," quick brists and head balancers, have a novel and effective act.

The whole, was well arranged and highly entertaining.

Nantasket Line.

The fine steamers of the Nantasket line provide unexcelled service to Nantasket Beach and Hull and at this season when the beach is at its best, a journey thither is its own reward. The wonderful beach, the great State bath house, the attractions of Paragon Park and the Palm Garden as well as the boardwalk and side shows make this resort unique.

Plymouth Trip.

The steamer Betty Alden sails every day for Plymouth at 1 p.m. She stops at the home of the Pilgrims long enough to enable the passengers to dine and see the town and get back to Boston by 6 p.m.

Paragon Palm Garden.

This week's array of talent in the Palm Garden at Paragon Park, Nantasket, is by far the best that has been so far. Many new features have been introduced both in the entertainment on the raised platform and in the Cabaret Girls, whose number has been increased to a dozen. The special features this week include Mabel Woodworth in a clever singing specialty, Crawford and Montrose in a unique wooden shoe dancing act and Hello Una, sensational trapezist. Last night's amateur dancing contest was a most interesting affair, this season's and beautiful silver trophy cups were the prizes awarded.

The engagement of Mlle Sabina and Mr. Bronner has been extended another week. Their act is changed every evening this week to both the Saturday and Sunday bills. Visitors are sure to be thrilled with delight by the patrons who thong these popular resorts.

Lexington Park.

Lexington Park is offering this week a rip roaring old time minstrel show that had the crowds in roars from start to finish, at last evening's performance. The Big City Minstrels" with John Fields as interlocutor, four old time end men, and the orpheus Quartette, composed of two leading Boston quartettes, make up a group of entertainers hard to beat.

Children's Hair Troubles

Much harm results from washing a child's head with common soaps and shampoos, as some of them contain too much alkali.

This makes the scalp rough and dry, and often leads to a diseased condition, which causes the hair to fall out. A safe thing to use is a shampoo made of pure Refined Creamy Soap, White of Eggs, Cocoanut Oil, Glycerin and Salicylic Acid. Birt's Head Wash is made of these ingredients. It removes the dirt and disease germs that settle in the hair and on the scalp, and it makes the hair vigorous and glossy.

Drug and department stores sell it in hygienic tubes at 25c.

ATTRACTIONS AT THE THEATRES

The following vaudeville features appear on the bill at the Scollay Square Olympia Theatre: Daisy Cameron, in songs, made good; the Lucas Juggling Jacks do a very novel and pleasing turn that went well; Wm. S. Gill & Company, in the intensely dramatic detective sketch, "Jenks, Crook," went big; Mc-Dowell & Carp, musical offering, pleased immensely; Reimont's Miss were a decided hit, but the surprise of all was Santos & Hayes, the jolly girls. The comparison between the two girls is very distinct. Miss Santos weighing 325 pounds and Miss Hayes ninety. Fred Carson and sister, aerial cyclists, did some wonderful stunts on their bicycles.

Modern Theatre.

The Man on the Box," an interesting military romance with Max Figman and Lotta Robertson in the leading characters, is the feature photo production for this week at the Modern Theatre. The rest of the bill includes a series of classical vocal selections by the Modern Trio and modern Quartette. Miss Betty Harold, "Dutch" and several interesting character songs and Arthur J. Marshall in his organ recital.

Villa Napoli.

There is general appreciation among the pleasure-seekers who have visited the Villa Napoli at Nantasket in the high class quality of entertainment offered by Manager M. Pesano. The cabaret girls include Bessie Warren, Edna Ayer and Ida Gunther, who provide plenty of amusement in their cabaret work. Miss Grace Cavanagh and Lester Young offer an interesting exhibition of the modern dances while additional vaudeville is presented from a raised platform.

More than 150 members of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of Massachusetts will hold a jollification outing tomorrow at the Villa Napoli, Nantasket, in celebration of the recent repeal of the 20-minute motion picture law. The committee comprises Ernest H. Horstmann, H. Campbell, S. Grant, J. Lourie, P. J. Toden and J. F. Patten, who have arranged an elaborate program for the day. The party will leave Rowes Wharf shortly after noon and arrive at Nantasket in time to participate in a number of athletic games. The feature will be a ball game between the married and single men of the organization. A handsome silver cup donated by President Horstmann will be presented to the winning team and the entire events of the day will be recorded on a 2-reel motion picture production.

Bowdoin Square.

The Violette Mascot Show with new features amused large audiences yesterday while "The Girl from Utah" vaudeville and the splendid motion picture program of the management was equally agreeable. The show at the Bowdoin is distinguished by being the only one with a chorus in town at present.

Rainey Hunt Pictures.

The last week of the 1914 series of Paul J. Rainey's African Hunt Pictures began yesterday afternoon at the Shubert Theatre. This is the fourth and last week of this delightful entertainment of moving pictures showing wild animals and natives in their native haunts, and performances will be given every afternoon and evening as usual.

Provincetown Trips.

Provincetown, the first landing place of the Pilgrims, seems to be the favorite excursion objective this week. At Provincetown sightseers will find much to interest them in the historic relics which abound in the town. Dorothy Bradford leaves at 9 a. m. and arrives back at Rowes wharf at 6:30 and Sunday's at 7 p. m.

'LION AND THE MOUSE' SEEN AT THE MAJESTIC

"The Lion and the Mouse" came back last evening to remain one week at the Majestic Theatre.

This powerful drama proved to be just as absorbing as when it was originally produced, a large and appreciative audience—figuratively, the "lion"—being held enmeshed in a "net" of interest in the performance until released by the final curtain—literally.

The story itself, well known to theatre-goers and readers, was never acted and better. Time were to judge by frequent applause and the curtain calls.

Edmund Breese, Boston's favorite actor, was, of course, a tower of strength. As Hon. James John Burket Ryder, the money octopus; for it was in this part he made his first and greatest success.

Mr. Breese was ably supported by Miss Margaret Bourne as Shirley Rossmore, Miss Francis Larrimore as Kate Roberts and Donald Meek as Jefferson Ryder, others in the fine cast being George Bonnot, Joseph Brehm, Raymond Capp, Frederic Ormonde, Augusta Gill, Rose Morison, Helen Russell, T. L. Leahy, Willard Pegg, Florence Tewksbury and Inez Adams.

Plymouth Theatre.

The Plymouth Theatre will begin its regular season with "Under Cover," which opens with a matinee and night performance on Saturday next. The regular matinees on Wednesday and Saturday will be given over to the benefit for the Salem fire sufferers. Owing to prior bookings, Selwyn & Company can send "Under Cover" to the Plymouth for three weeks only, and seats are now on sale for all performances including the regular matinees on Thursday and Saturday.

Bass Point and Nahant Line.

Vacationists will find a pleasant diversion to the usual round of Summer recreation in the delightful sail down Boston Harbor to Bass Point and Nahant. The Bass Point Hotels are offering many specialties in shore dinners with musical entertainment for the guests of the Bass Point Hotels. There are plenty of amusements at Bass Point, as well as vaudeville and motion pictures, dancing, boating, fishing, scenic railway and games of all sorts.

Norumbega Park.

An excellent vaudeville bill is the theatrical attraction at Norumbega this week, leading the bill are "The Aerial Barbers" in a novel acrobatic exhibition of strength and agility. Francis Kennedy and Mabel Kramer in "A Study in Black and Brown" were very amusing and entertaining. "The Interne" a clever sketch by the dainty artistic musical number were Rose Perez in songs and vaudeville and motion pictures, dancing, boating, fishing, scenic railway and games of all sorts.

THE CRUMBLED HOPE OF THE WORLD!

On the Tribunal for Which This Beautiful Peace Palace at The Hague Was Built Civilization Founded Its Hope for the Future and Its Trust in the Present. And Overnight the Idea to Which It Was Dedicated Has Become a Grim Ruin!

Georgia's Big Work for All Humanity

The Atlanta Georgian has vindicated its vitality and its capacity for public service by inaugurating, leading and helping mightily to write upon the statute books of Georgia a wholesome anti-child labor bill.

It was a great achievement.

The House of Representatives in Atlanta has passed by a majority of 99 to 44 the Sheppard Child Labor bill prepared by the Georgian. The bill now goes with the prestige of a sweeping House victory and increased civic support to the consideration of an intelligent Senate. It is scarcely imaginable that this forward movement started by the lower House could be rejected by the upper chamber of Georgia's General Assembly.

Single-handed and alone among Atlanta newspapers, and practically without newspaper support in the State, the Georgian conducted a clean, fearless, tireless campaign in behalf of the bill.

If the Georgia Senate confirms the great progressive action of the House the general result will serve to emphasize and further inspire the magnificent movement in education and morals which is placing the State of Georgia in the very forefront of Southern Commonwealths.

The entire State seems to be pulsing with better life and larger progress.

Within the present year Atlanta has led the way, followed by Georgia, for the establishment by personal subscription of a great Presbyterian university, which is now backed by three-quarters of a million dollars in money, reviving the name and the antebellum glories of its old, historic Oglethorpe University.

Within the past month Asa G. Candler, Atlanta's richest citizen, has made the magnificent donation of one and a half million dollars, to which another half million has promptly been added, for the establishment of a great Methodist university, which will be the richest and best equipped educational institution in the South. Other great scholarly enterprises are being endowed by the State and by private individuals; and the New South is leading everywhere in educational and altruistic efforts.

There are thousands of people in the North and West to whom every forward step in the South is of keen and vital interest. Whether Southern born or Southern sired or simply national in the largest sympathy, they rejoice in all the growth and in every great and purposeful thing that marks the recuperation and noble advance of the Southern people so lately in shadow and sorrow.

To these people it seems that the favorable action of the Georgia Senate on the anti-child labor bill is an essential part of the program of progress.

It seems to be Georgia's part to lead in the great and humane legislation. A large majority of progressive Commonwealths have anti-child labor laws more comprehensive even than the Sheppard bill. Only Georgia's immediate neighbors, North and South Carolina and Alabama, are backward and reactionary.

Somehow since 1868 the North and West have come to look to Georgia for leadership and progress. The master influence of the State in Southern affairs entails a great responsibility which the Commonwealth holds to history and to the future.

Surely the State of Oglethorpe and Stephens, of Grady and Gordon, of Peabody and Candler will not fail to follow the finest philanthropy of the time and lift its little children out of the reek and sweat and fetid air of factories and draw them through its schools up to the light of the opportunity of the sun-bright civilization of today.

Fearful the percentage of child illiteracy behind this system of the Southern mills! Fearful the health ravage in the little frames on which the State must build its future!

Every Woman's Club in Georgia, every labor organization in the State and thousands of the loftiest and most dependable citizens of the State stood with the Atlanta Georgian in the advocacy of the Sheppard bill.

Georgia would be scarcely Georgia—brave, progressive and humane—if, having put her hand to the plow of progress in this matter she should now turn back.

All Georgia's friends across the Potomac and Ohio look to see the Georgia Senate indorse the Georgia House in this measure of human kindness and public policy.

Money Will Be Plenty and Banks Are Sound

There is every reason to believe that the banking situation in this country is SOUNDER than ever before, and that there will be ENOUGH CASH in circulation to answer all business or other needs.

American bankers have wisely taken steps to prepare for a greater demand than now exists or probably ever will. After all the exportation of gold, this country has TWICE AS MUCH AS ANY IN THE WORLD. There is more currency in circulation now than ever. It is good for every cent it calls for and will be augmented by many millions of an emergency issue within a few days.

This is a time for the people of the United States to be grateful for PEACE AND PLENTY. They have the greatest crops in history to enrich them, and to stimulate manufacturing and commerce this Fall. The home market is the greatest market in the world, and they not only have it to supply, but will soon be facing an unprecedented demand for goods from Europe.

Sea fights are decisive things and, whoever wins them, the Atlantic will soon be open to commerce.

What is most needed at this hour in this country is absolute faith in its financial and other resources and the cool thinking which is a national characteristic.

More Truth Than Poetry

By James J. Montague

The Mother

I HEAR the blaring bands go by; I hear the marching feet;
All day they drum their dreadful dirge along the dusty street.
I hear the crowds give cheer on cheer of fierce delirious joy.
And wonder if they see him there, my little, little boy.
A baby only yesterday, with soft and sunny hair
So helpless and so innocent; so fragile and so fair

SO STRONG I felt to shield him then, safe sheltered in my arm
It seemed to me the whole wide world could never do him harm.
And oh, the long, long nights I watched beside his trundle bed
To fight away the pain that racked his little fevered head.
I fought his battles for him then; he leaves my side today
To fight far greater ones alone, and oh! so far away!

THE little dimpled hand that lay so trustingly in mine
Must grasp a rifle barrel soon along the firing line.
My baby boy I held so close I felt his fluttering breath
Has left me empty-armed and gone to see the face of death.
And never mother's voice to soothe, nor mother's arm to shield,
From all the direful perils of the smoke-hung battle field!

OH, why must mothers stay behind? Is not a mother's place
Beside the baby that must look in Death's remorseless face?
The years have wrought a change in him that only others see—
For all his soldier uniform he's still a boy to me.
Sent forth to kill, he knows not why, a King's insensate toy,
While I must wait and pray at home—my baby, baby boy!

Contraband of War and Rights of Our Shippers Defined

By EUGENE P. CARVER.

Vice-president of the International Law Association, authority on international, admiralty and marine law, manager of the American Record, correspondent of English Lloyds, director in insurance companies and member of the law firm of Carver, Wardner, Cavanaugh & Walker of Boston and New York.

This and other articles that will follow are written especially for the Boston AMERICAN.

IN treating of the subject of contraband of war we can well quote what the late lamented President Cleveland said: "We are not entering a condition and not a theory, and as at the time of writing the President of the United States and the Secretary of State have not made a written declaration of neutrality, which is necessary under the provisions of the Hague conference, we are not in a position to be guided by a very important diplomatic document and our merchants can merely look to precedents, notwithstanding the fact that the hostile nations of Europe are themselves formulating a policy of their own.

The term "contraband of war" is a general one, and although it seems to refer to specific articles of commerce, still it may have a very broad application.

Under the London Declaration of 1909, articles which may or may not be contraband of war are grouped in three divisions as follows:

First—Articles that are contraband of war per se. This group includes such articles as arms and ammunition, powder and explosives, military clothing and equipment, camp utensils, armor plate, war ships and implements and machinery specially designed for the manufacture or repair of munitions of war or war material, whether used on land or sea.

Second—Articles that MAY be considered contraband of war. These are things that are liable to be used in warfare or for use of combatants, such as food stuffs, clothing, gold and silver in coin or bullion, vehicles available for use in war, railway material, flying machines, coal and other fuel and lubricants, powder and explosive materials, and several articles which are commonly used by the army when in the field, but which may be equally adapted for purposes of peace.

Third—Articles which could never be classified as contraband of war, such as raw materials, like cotton, wool, silk, jute or hemp, rubber hides, nitrates and phosphates for agricultural purposes, metallic ores or metal in the form of bars, paper, soap, bleaching powder, agricultural, printing, textile and printing machinery, precious stones, clocks and watches, fashions, fancy goods and feathers and ladies' dresses and underwear.

The London Declaration of 1909 was never assented to by the great powers as stated in my article of yesterday.

In Article 27 of the Declaration it is declared that articles which are not susceptible for use in war cannot be said to be contraband. Articles 28 and 29 specify in particular seventeen classes of commodities which cannot be treated as contraband.

In Articles 22, 25 and 26 of the Declaration it is provided that belligerent powers may by due notification add to the list of absolute and conditional contraband and that if a power waives the right to treat as contraband an article comprised in any of the enumerated articles, such intention must be duly notified.

SOME CASES CITED.

We will assume that goods are shipped upon an American vessel which, under a declaration of neutrality, is entitled to trade with all ports, whether neutral or otherwise, provided none of the ports are a subject of blockade, either de facto or by proclamation. This, in brief, brings us to the subject of the detention of the ship.

Provided the goods are clearly contraband of war, and the vessel is bound to a territory belonging to or occupied by the enemy or to armed forces of the enemy, the goods are subject to seizure, whether the carriage of the goods is direct or considers the transshipment by water to another port for subsequent transport of the goods by land, or, if the goods are documented for discharge at the enemy's port or the vessel is cleared to call at an enemy's port. If, therefore, goods are consigned for German ports and are liable so or absolute contraband of war, they will be subject to seizure provided either the ship was bound to Hamburg, a German port, or to Rotterdam, subject a through bill of lading to some port in Germany, or to Rotterdam with the prospect of transshipment by water or rail to some German port.

In case of conditional contraband, coming now to the second class, if the goods are consigned to the government of a hostile state or to the army or navy forces, unless from the nature of the articles themselves it is clear that they could not be used for the assistance of the armed forces of the country, or if the goods, of whatever nature, were consigned to a fortified port and could be used for the sustenance of the same as a base for the waging of war on any hostile nation, they would be considered contraband.

The voyages of vessels, therefore, are to be considered first as DIRECT VOYAGES and, SECOND, AS CONTINUOUS VOYAGES.

OPEN TO INQUIRY.

Bearing on this subject we should also remember that the mere colorable shipment of goods from a port of the United States to a port in a neutral country, for instance, Rotterdam, Holland, which are clearly intended for the German army or for the sustenance of the German nation while engaged in hostilities, is something which is open to inquiry, even though under a neutral flag and from a neutral port.

The question as to whether or not the articles are to be used in the actual hostilities or for the support of the army or navy of the countries engaged in the hostilities, is to be determined by the nation which makes the seizure. The burden of proof in this case is not upon the party making the seizure, but upon the claimant of the goods as neutral property.

There are many statements in the Declaration of London which never received the affirmative consent, by treaty or otherwise, of the nations now engaged in the great European conflict, but every one of the delegates who were called to the London Conference stated that their country was not bound by any expressions of theirs, and this conference has never been made the subject of treaty between the different nations which participated therein.

Of late, in the newspapers, we have seen the statement that the Hague Tribunal is the final tribunal in all matters relating to prize or seizure, but the statement is not correct, for, although the Hague Conferences has wished to have an International Code of Laws with regard to prize, such a code of laws has never been drawn, much less expressly assented to by any of the great nations which participated in the conferences.

INTERNATIONAL POLICY.

From the time of Benjamin Franklin, our first great diplomat, the policy of America has always been in favor of the immunity of private property at sea. Our position was clearly defined during the Napoleonic wars and the second war with England was one of the results of our insistence on this doctrine, in which was incorporated the denial of right of search.

This country refused to be a party to the treaty of Paris in 1856 unless there was incorporated the provision of the immunity of private property at sea, and our declaration of neutrality should place before the world in clearly defined terms the policy to which we have always adhered since we have become a nation.

We would state in clear and unequivocal terms what the rights of neutrals are as we understand them and these rights should not be overridden by the mere declaration or announcement of any belligerent nation.

In the language of the Monroe Doctrine, we are not concerned with European policies, but the rights of our citizens on land and sea, and their persons and property must be respected.

Lincoln and Grant

By REV. S. P. CADMAN, D.D.

IN the cyclonic burst of the slavery era emerged the supreme and unforgettable figure of the war. A greater rebuke to conventional and pretentious men and methods has never been made than his simple, unadorned story gives.

Obscure, poor, illiterate, till he had thoroughly schooled himself, he rose without haste or confusion to the meridian, and there found, through suffering and death, fame and blessedness; every epoch in his life being a demonstration of the innate merit of manhood under freedom's law.

Three characteristics distinguished him—immense intellectualism, equally great morality and a heart catholic toward all.

His debates with Douglas, who was a man of great force and intellect, proved Mr. Lincoln to be a master exponent of, democracy; one who believed in the rights of all men, and that traffic in human flesh was such a curse that no country could endure which carried it on.

Next to Lincoln in the retinue of patriots was General Grant. He came from a not very successful farming business, and rose to be one of the great generals whom all time must acknowledge.

He chose the best side in a painful controversy where his great opponent, Lee, was not so fortunate in choice, though unsurpassed in military genius.

Both men rose above the hate and prejudice war engenders. Nothing became them in life more than the way in which they left it, the one the president of a poor struggling college, the other the ex-President of the United States, writing till death stayed his hand to protect his family from want.

Much of the after stability and concord of the nation are due to the inspiring example of these illustrious leaders.

Men Who Made America

Peter Stuyvesant, the Famous One-Legged Governor of New Amsterdam.

By REV. THOMAS B. GREGORY

Copyright, 1914, by the Star Company

WHEN, in 1647, Peter Stuyvesant landed in New Amsterdam to represent the power of the Stadtholder on these western shores, Dutchmen had already been here for more than thirty-three years, and it is not so much with the choleric old gentleman of the wooden leg as with his countrymen in general that this article deals.

We will simply take the bluff old Governor as a sign and symbol of the breed of men who did so much for the making of America.

It is a fact that the Puritans made New England, and it is none the less a fact that the Dutch made the Puritans.

Who needs to be told that the Hollanders are the most wonderful people of whom history affords us any knowledge? It was wonderful to have lifted their country from the bottom of the sea, and it was still more wonderful to have successfully defended that country's liberties against the mighty power of Spain.

During the long struggle of Holland against their would-be destroyers, Englishmen went over from time to time to help them in their fight, and the English soldiers who came monarchists went back home republicans. Dutchmen have always loved their liberties, and it was from the sturdy burghers that the English soldiers serving in the Netherlands learned the principles of democracy that were eventually to transform the British royalty into what Bagehot would call a "mere ornament."

When Alva set up his infamous "Council of Blood" in the Netherlands, more than one hundred thousand Hollanders crossed the channel to make their home in England. "These men," a great historian writes, "were not paupers seeking alms; they were industrious, self-supporting men, scholars, bankers, manufacturers, merchants; all of them freemen, refugees for freedom's sake and for conscience's sake. They were grand, brave men, constructed out of 'the very prodigality of nature, massive in intellect and in soul. Never in all the history of the world was there such another missionary movement on such a magnificent scale."

Now, it was from those noble men that the people of England learned to love with a renewed zeal the principles of human liberty, and to detest with a new strength the tinsel and red tape of aristocracy and royalty. From the southern and eastern counties of England—where the Hollanders settled and intermarried with the English—came the English commonwealth. From the same counties came the "Ironsides," the "Bill of Rights," the "Free Parliament" and modern England.

The Pilgrims, it is well known, lived in Holland for twelve years before setting out on their memorable voyages to the New World; and it was while dwelling among the Dutchmen that they learned the sturdy democratic ideas which, later on, were to clothe themselves in the "Town Meeting" of New England—the starting point of our American free political institutions.

William Penn had a Dutch mother, and it was from the teachings of that mother that he drafted into his Pennsylvania code the large and liberal principles of the brave little republic beyond the seas.

Thomas Hooker, the founder of the city of Hartford, the author of the first Connecticut Constitution, and the originator of practical democracy on this side of the ocean, was an English refugee who came direct from Holland to the New World, full of the Dutch ideas and principles, which he was only too anxious to put into practice in the Connecticut colony.

In what is now the great "Empire State" of the Union were reared the first free church and first free school known in the present United States of America.

It is generally conceded, even by his devoutest admirers, that Governor Peter Stuyvesant had a will of his own, and was at times inclined to be pretty dictatorial, and one day in 1653, when the fiery, one-legged old Governor, the burghers of New Amsterdam told him right to his face that "in Paris in 1856 unless there was incorporated the provision of the immunity of private property at sea, and our declaration of neutrality should place before the world in clearly defined terms the policy to which we have always adhered since we have become a nation."

We would state in clear and unequivocal terms what the rights of neutrals are as we understand them and these rights should not be overridden by the mere declaration or announcement of any belligerent nation.

"These men," a great historian writes, "were not paupers seeking alms; they were industrious, self-supporting men, scholars, bankers, manufacturers, merchants; all of them freemen, refugees for freedom's sake and for conscience's sake. They were grand, brave men, constructed out of 'the very prodigality of nature, massive in intellect and in soul. Never in all the history of the world was there such another missionary movement on such a magnificent scale."

Now, it was from those noble men that the people of England learned to love with a renewed zeal the principles of human liberty, and to detest with a new strength the tinsel and red tape of aristocracy and royalty. From the southern and eastern counties of England—where the Hollanders settled and intermarried with the English—came the English commonwealth. From the same counties came the "Ironsides," the "Bill of Rights," the "Free Parliament" and modern England.

The Pilgrims, it is well known, lived in Holland for twelve years before setting out on their memorable voyages to the New World; and it was while dwelling among the Dutchmen that they learned the sturdy democratic ideas which, later on, were to clothe themselves in the "Town Meeting" of New England—the starting point of our American free political institutions.

William Penn had a Dutch mother, and it was from the teachings of that mother that he drafted into his Pennsylvania code the large and liberal principles of the brave little republic beyond the seas.

Thomas Hooker, the founder of the city of Hartford, the author of the first Connecticut Constitution, and the originator of practical democracy on this side of the ocean, was an English refugee who came direct from Holland to the New World, full of the Dutch ideas and principles, which he was only too anxious to put into practice in the Connecticut colony.

In what is now the great "Empire State" of the Union were reared the first free church and first free school known in the present United States of America.

It is generally conceded, even by his devoutest admirers, that Governor Peter Stuyvesant had a will of his own, and was at times inclined to be pretty dictatorial, and one day in 1653, when the fiery, one-legged old Governor, the burghers of New Amsterdam told him right to his face that "in Paris in 1856 unless there was incorporated the provision of the immunity of private property at sea, and our declaration of neutrality should place before the world in clearly defined terms the policy to which we have always adhered since we have become a nation.

We would state in clear and unequivocal terms what the rights of neutrals are as we understand them and these rights should not be overridden by the mere declaration or announcement of any belligerent nation.

In the language of the Monroe Doctrine, we are not concerned with European policies, but the rights of our citizens on land and sea, and their persons and property must be respected.
